Two Great Trees.
Plant Idle? Certainly.
Diamonds All Around.
Your Heat Fights Germs.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright 1928.)

FROM a big orange tree in Southern California, the Riverside Chamber of Commerce sends 126 oranges to as many newspaper editors. The tree is one of two imported from Brazil by the United States Department of Agriculture. Those two trees are the father and mother of all the "Washington Navel Trees" that make up great groves in Southern California.

SIMILARLY, a few cherry trees, brought by Lucullus from his wars in Asia, are the ancestors of millions of cherry trees that small American boys climb every year. Such are the wealth and generosity of nature.

MR. ROGERS at Muscle Shoals inspects with his mournful cowboy eye, a $150,000,000 plant built by the people to produce nitrogen to supply cheap fertilizer for farmers, and explosives in case of war.

Mr. Rogers remarks that such a plant lying idle is enlightening. It means that government isn't quite ready to deliver the plant over to the power trust.

AND until the power trust gets it, that trust won't let anybody else use the Muscle Shoals plant.

BEYERS, minister of mines, for South Africa, announces discovery of an amazing diamond field. He picked up three thousand dollars' worth of diamonds lying on the surface of the ground in an hour. Employes of the government, which reserves the new "diggings" as government property, gathered up several hundred thousand dollars' worth of diamonds in a short time.

THIS news will worry Britain's diamond monopoly for a while, although reserving the "diggings" as state property, will prevent any sudden glutting of the diamond market.

In the long run providence seems to take care of gold, silver and diamond value.

The needs and wealth of the human race increase more rapidly than the supply of gold and diamonds.

DISCOVERY of a new leprosy cure, at the Malamulo Leper Colony in South Africa, is encouraging. Chalmoogra oil has worked miracles against the ancient disease. The new method uses the heat of a leper's body to kill the disease germs. A high fever is artificially established, and the germs die, unable to stand a temperature to which the patient's blood is raised.

THIS reminds doctors that when nature increases body temperature, the extra heat has its value. Indiscriminate use of drugs to deaden the heart and reduce temperature is extremely dangerous, interfering with the body's effort to conquer invading germs.

CONGRESS will proceed cautiously in barring Mexican labor. Legislation concerning Asiatic labor has raised numerous problems, particularly in California.

If Mexican labor should be suddenly excluded, the problem for the entire southwest would be most serious.

MACHINERY will be devised eventually, to do the so-called back breaking farm work that proud United States citizens accustomed to their automobiles, no longer will do.

But nothing should be done too suddenly, unless the government is willing to precipitate hard times over a wide area.

A CHICAGO doctor is promptly convicted of murder in the first degree by an intelligent jury, for an illegal operation that caused the death of a girl 19 years old.

It was shown that the man neglected the unfortunate girl when a nurse reported that she had no more money, and that he would not send her to a hospital where she might have been cared for, because "that might cause suspicion."

CAPITAL punishment is brutal and out of date. A Hell, burning forever, which means trillions of years and more, seems severe. But the electric chair with Hell to follow would appear to be about the right prescription for that Chicago doctor.

THANKS to Mussolini's common sense, a new law compels merchants in Italy to mark prices plainly and stick to the prices. That will increase foreign buying, especially by Americans who do not like to pay double or devote half an hour to bargaining over a trifle.

Merchants in Italy won't like it, but their business and prosperity will increase.

ORDER AGENTS HERE

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Special agents from the Prohibition Enforcement Bureau will be dispatched immediately to the Western Pennsylvania coal fields to conduct a thorough investigation of liquor law enforcement conditions there, Prohibition Commissioner Doran announced today.

Doran said that the administrator, John Pennington, at Pittsburgh, has heretofore concentrated his efforts on wholesalers, and paid little attention to retailers of liquor in the Pennsylvania coal fields, but that an intensive campaign to close retail "speak-easies" would be launched there at once.

Boy Killing 'Perfect Crime'

By FRED VAN DEVENDER,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, March 3.—The perfect crime, the fiendish murder whose perpetrator is never discovered and the slayer lives in his ghoulish glee, is again in sight.

Leopold and Loeb tried to commit the perfect crime; Hickman believed he had hit on the secret; hundreds of other criminals have failed.

Now, the discovery of the bodies of two little boys, their bodies bound with wire, in the ship canal to the south of Chicago is the greatest mystery the detective bureau has ever been called upon to solve.

The body of the first boy was taken from the canal 10 days ago. The second body Thursday night.

The similarity of features and dress lead the detectives to believe they are brothers.

But their identity remains a mystery. Thousands of parents, whose children are missing, have passed through the little undertaking establishment in Indiana Harbor, where the bodies lie, seeking to identify. But still the boys are unnamed.

Search by dragging the canal in the belief that the boys' parents

FORCED TO EARTH AT SHARON

Dieudonne Costes and Joseph Lebrix, French round-the-world good will fliers, were forced down yesterday at Sharon in a heavy snowstorm. They had bucked a heavy wind for six hours in an attempt to reach Detroit from Mitchell Field, New York. The Frenchmen landed their plane safely on a farm three miles outside Sharon and hoped to resume their flight some time today.

EXPLOSION KILLS THREE ON PGH. STEAMBOAT

POINT PLEASANT, W. Va., March 3.—(AP.)—Two engineers and a boiler-maker were dead today after a throttle on a newly repaired boiler on the steamer Senator Cordill blew out just as the boat was leaving a dock here. The dead:

George McElhose, 50, first engineer, of Detroit, Mich.; George Letman, 62, second engineer, of Orlando, Fla., and Roy Roe, Gallipolis.

The accident occurred three hours after C. G. Thomas, federal steamboat inspector, had gone over boiler repairs made during the past six weeks. Officers of the boat said they believed the throttle was blown out as a result of steam coming suddenly in contact with cold, condensed water which had not been removed from the boiler and pipes following the inspection.

The boat was not damaged.

The Senator Cordill had been tied up at a Kanawha River dock while undergoing repairs and was just pulling out for Pittsburgh when the trouble happened. The boat's usual route is between Charleston and Pittsburgh and she is owned by the Shippers' Packet Company of Pittsburgh.

"Neutral" Probe Begun

A. V. Snell, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said yesterday that the executive committee had authorized the appointment of a special committee to present "a neutral view" of the coal strike to the Senate Investigating Committee at Washington.

George R. Wallace, former president of the Chamber, had been designated as chairman of the special committee, Snell said, and told to appoint its members himself. A meeting was to be held at noon, Snell added, to select the personnel of the special committee, none of whom, he said, would be in any way connected with the coal industry.

A reporter visited the Chamber of Commerce at noon, inquired

LAKEHURST, N. J., March 3.—(AP.)—Four sailors who had the terrifying experience of dangling from the handrails of the giant dirigible Los Angeles 200 feet in the air while the big ship bucked and tossed in a buffeting wind squall were safely back in barracks today.

They were George L. Smith, of 2721 Stone street, Port Huron, Mich., a member of the ship's crew; R. H. Dilks, E. W. Kirkpatrick and D. N. Lipke, members of the ground crew. A fifth man, B. S. Papinsky, who jumped to the ground when the Los Angeles was 20 feet in the air, was in the sick bay today with a sprained leg.

UP THEY GO!

The five men had been helping, with 200 others, in an effort to haul the ship into its hangar when a snow squall rose, lifted the dirigible from the earth and swept her into the air.

They had not heard an officer shout the command to let go the handrails of the dirigible, and when the ship shot upward they still were clinging to the rail.

When the ship had risen 20 feet, Papinsky let go and dropped. At 200 feet, the four men still hanging on were hauled through the cabin windows directly over their heads.

The Los Angeles was safely put into its hangar here at 7:05 o'clock this morning, after an all-night struggle with a gusty wind which for hours kept it cruising about the field. Attempts to hitch the giant airship to its mooring mast had proved futile.

It was long after daylight when the wind finally died down, and the ground crew, held in readiness during the night after being hastily summoned by the blowing of the

Lindy's Ma Hops Off For Home

By International News Service.

BOSTON, March 3. — Mrs. Evangeline Lodle Lindbergh, mother of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, and four flying companions took off for Detroit from the East Boston airport at 8:04 a. m. today.

Flying conditions were ideal for the return trip home of the "Lone Eagle's" mother.

At the controls of the airplane was Lieut. Albert J. Hegenberger, Pacific flier. Others of the party were Lieut. Harry A. Johnson, Miss Maude Dawson, Mrs. Lindbergh's fellow-teacher in Detroit, and Maj. Cooper. The same party, with the exception of Maj. Cooper, flew here from Detroit last Sunday to attend the National Education Association convention, which paid "Lindy's" mother the supreme honor of educators—the gift of the golden emblem of life membership.

Morrow's Plea Disproved By Jacksonville Contract

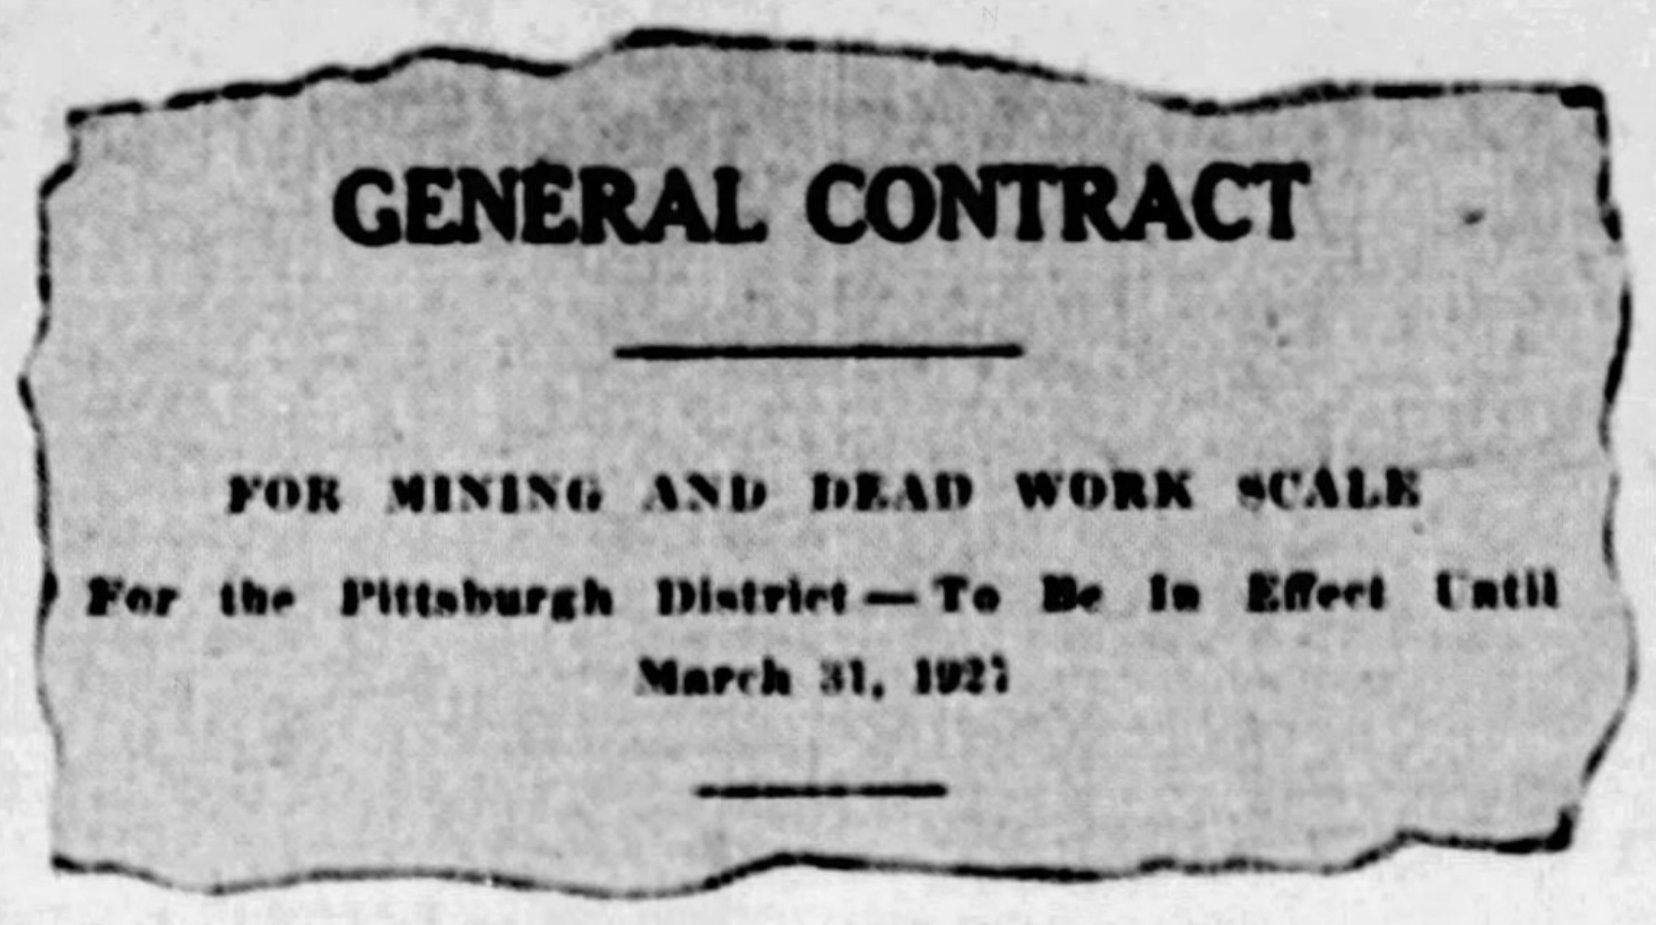
Mines Unionized, Not Men.

The Pittsburgh Coal Company's contentions as to the nature of the Jacksonville Agreement are contradicted by the document itself.

The Jacksonville Agreement was a contract made by the Pittsburgh Coal Company and other operators with the United Mine Workers, under the terms of which the operators agreed to pay the miners certain wages until March 31, 1927. On August 10, 1925, the Pittsburgh Coal Company reduced its miners' wages to a level lower than that called for by the Jacksonville Agreement.

J. D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, told the Senate Investigating Committee last Saturday that the Jacksonville Agreement was not a contract, not even an agreement in the sense of a legally or morally binding compact, but merely an "arrangement", which the company was free to ignore if it saw fit.

In a paid advertisement published in The Sun-Telegraph last Tuesday the Pittsburgh Coal Company repeated that the Jacksonville Agreement was not morally or legally binding. It said in the advertisement that Mr. Morrow asked the senators if they had ever read the document, and they admitted they had not. The Pittsburgh Coal Company continued, in the advertisement, to refer to the Jacksonville Agreement as an "arrangement", and sedulously avoided referring to it as a "contract". Yet it is called a "contract" in the paper itself, as the subjoined photographic facsimile from an official printed copy of the document bears witness:



GENERAL CONTRACT

FOR MINING AND DEAD WORK SCALE
For the Pittsburgh District — To Be In Effect Until March 31, 1927

Mr. Morrow further contended in his conference with the senators, and the Pittsburgh Coal Company repeated the contention in its advertisement, that the company did not obligate itself to pay all of its miners the Jacksonville scale, but only the individual members of the United Mine Workers. It maintained it was free to supplant the union miners with non-union men and to pay them lower wages.

It said in its advertisement:

> "No obligation to operate mines.
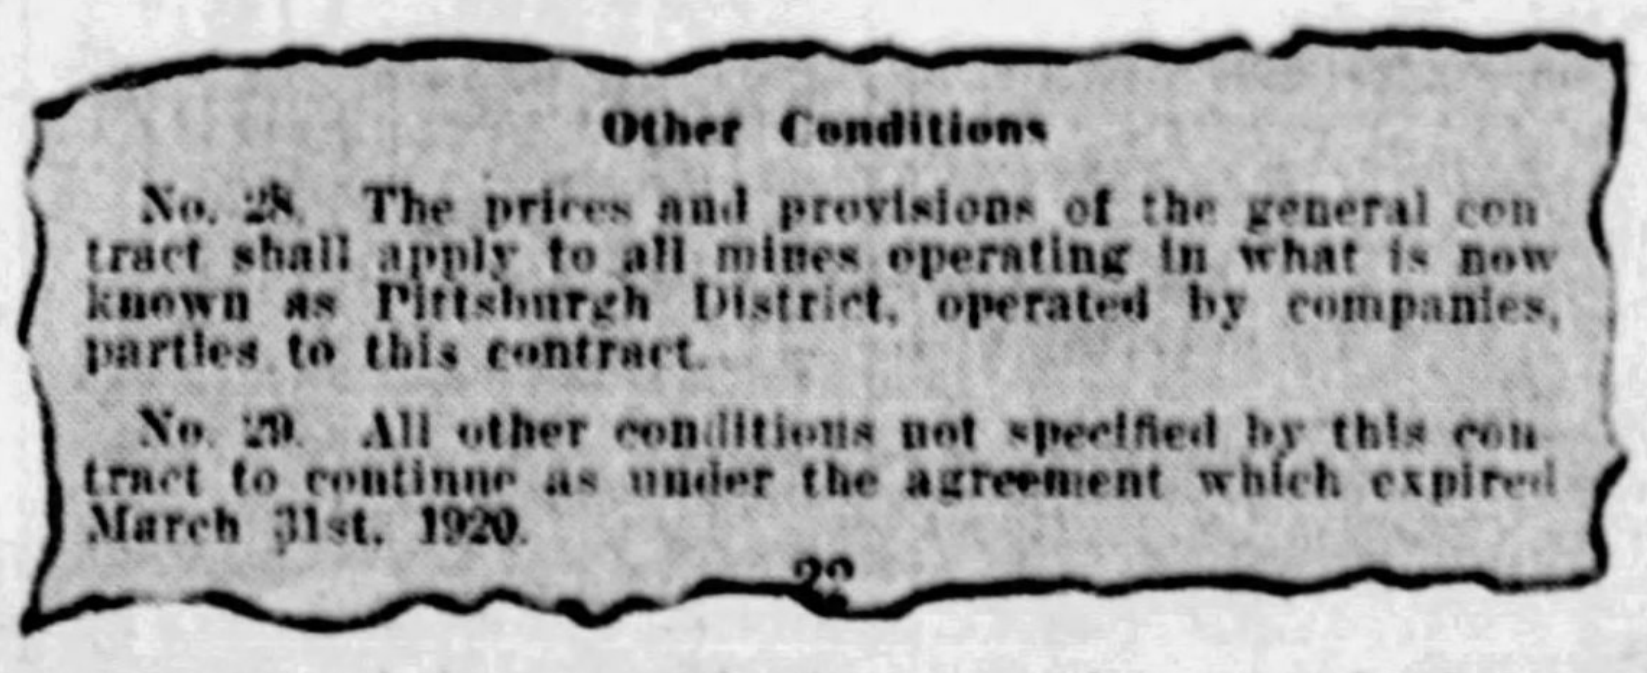
> "All that this company and other companies here bound themselves to do at Jacksonville was to pay the scale of wages there set forth to members of the United Mine Workers of America only so long as they employed members of that organization. But they did not obligate themselves to run their mines a single day subject to the union if they saw fit not to do so."

But that is not the language of the Jacksonville Agreement. That document specifically says that "the prices and provisions of this general contract shall apply to all MINES operating in what is now known as the Pittsburgh district, operated by companies parties to this contract".

THE CONTRACTS APPLIED TO MINES, NOT MEN: THE MINES WERE UNIONIZED, NOT THE MEN. Here is the proof in another photographic reproduction from the Jacksonville Agreement:



Other Conditions

No. 28. The prices and provisions of the general contract shall apply to all mines operating in what is now known as Pittsburgh District, operated by companies, parties to this contract.

No. 29. All other conditions not specified by this contract to continue as under the agreement which expired March 31st, 1920.

22

If the Pittsburgh Coal Company has any further explanation to make to the people of this community, in view of the proofs above set forth, the columns of the Sun-Telegraph are at its disposal, free of charge.

FRENCH ACES DOWN

SHARON, Pa., March 3.—It is beginning to look as though Dieudonne Coste and Joseph Lebrix, French world fliers, will spend Sunday in Sharon.

Forced down on a farm late yesterday, the fliers were unable to start their motor today. From the farmhouse near Sharpsville where they were forced down by a snowstorm, the Frenchmen carried hot water which they poured into the radiator of their "Nungesser-Coli" plane. But the motor wouldn't turn. The water chilled. And Lebrix promised that if one more attempt failed they would spend the Sabbath exploring the Shenango Valley from their hotel room—and await warmer weather than the zero clime of today.

Their inability to talk English fluently didn't handicap the Frenchmen, thanks to a happy coincidence. Mrs. C. E. Grafe, of Sharpsville, a native of the same town in France which claims Coste, interpreting the fliers' exclamations.

Costes and Lebrix, who have flown over four continents, left Mitchel Field, New York, for Detroit early Friday, but after bucking strong head winds for six hours they r a snowstorm and landed, without difficulty, on a Sharpsville farm.

OIL QUIZ DEFIER WILL FIGHT CONTEMPT CASES

STEWART FACES JAIL TERM

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Col. Robert W. Stewart, millionaire chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, today faced two prosecutions for contempt for failing to answer questions of the Senate Oil Committee.

In the first case, he is charged with direct contempt of the Senate. He has filed an appeal from the court order dismissing the writ of habeas corpus which released him from custody of the Senate sergeant-at-arms.

In the other he must answer a contempt indictment returned by the federal grand jury. A date for his arraignment has not been set.

Stewart declined to answer two questions concerning the Liberty Bond fund of the Continental Trading Company. He challenged the Senate authority to pry into citizens' private affairs.

The maximum penalty for contempt is a $1,000 fine or a year's imprisonment. Stewart's attorneys announced they would carry the cases to the highest courts if necessary.

COOLIDGE HOLDS UP BILL TO REFIT TROOP SHIPS

WASHINGTON, March 3.—President Coolidge as yet is undecided on what action he will take on the bill passed by Congress to recondition the liners Monticello and Mt. Vernon so that they can be added to the shipping board fleet, it was stated at the White House. The ships were used as troop ships during the war.

FIND GIRL BOUND, GAGGED

ASHLAND, Ky., March 3.—(AP.)—Miss Virginia Coburn, 18, daughter of Frank Coburn, was found bound and gagged in the basement of her home in South Ashland this morning. She was unconscious, apparently the result of a narcotic, and could not tell what had happened.

She bore no outward evidences of an attack. She was found by her stepmother sprawled across several baskets of clothes. A window over her head was pushed in, indicating that she had been dropped through it into the basement.

Police said they learned the girl received a telephone call last night from a man and a few minutes after the girl left the house. The family retired about 10 o'clock and did not know the daughter had not returned until this morning, when she was found in the basement.

"TORCH" KILLING SUSPECT IS EX-SPY

SURRENDER EXPECTED SOON

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, March 3.—"Dr." Louis Clement, "inventor and scientist," wanted for questioning in connection with the "torch murder" of Margaret Brown, Park avenue governess, is in reality Armgaard Karl Graves, former self-styled German spy, whose checkered career has taken him through varied adventures in many lands, police believed today.

Police of New York and New Jersey were confident of locating Clement within a few hours. In fact there was a feeling at headquarters here that the "doctor" might surrender and submit to the scrutiny of witnesses who believe he was a suitor of Miss Brown's.

"Armgaard Karl Graves" was the signature affixed to a contract with Charles A. Levine, trans-Atlantic flier, dealing with a proposed $4,000,000 air line. Levine stated after seeing photographs of Clement that the two names belong to the same man. The man also was known as Count Kanitz and as Dr. Gruneit.

The last that Levine heard from the man was on Sunday, February 19, the day before the flaming, gasoline-soaked body of Miss Brown was found on the Somerville-Bernardsville road in New Jersey.

NABBED AS SPY

Armgaard Karl Graves cut a wide swath across two continents some years ago, being regarded as one of the boldest of international spies.

In 1917, just before this country went into the war, he was arrested in Washington, charged with attempting to blackmail the wife of Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff, then German ambassador to the United States.

The arrest and charges caused a furore of sensation in capital circles. [illegible] later the charges were dropped. "If every theater in Pittsburgh were equipped with such safeguards as these, I would sleep more peacefully," said Director of Public Safety James M. Clark, as he examined the safety controls of the motion picture machines in the projection room of the new Stanley Theater. Although film will ignite in a quarter of a second under the heat of the arc light, safety controls recently perfected and installed on the battery of projection machines in the Stanley Theater, the light is automatically cut off instantaneously when the machine or film stops. Those who visited the theater included, besides Director Clark, George T. Beckett, chief electrical wiring inspector for the city; H. L. EX-SCHOOL HEAD ASKS $250,000

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, March 3.—Seeking vindication from charges against his efficiency as Chicago school superintendent, and his loyalty as an American citizen, William McAndrew filed suit for libel against Mayor William Hale Thompson. He seeks $250,000 damages.

The suit was not filed with the idea of financial gain, Attorney Francis X. Busch, counsel for McAndrew, stated.

"The Mayor has made a great many public utterances against the loyalty, patriotism and ability of Mr. McAndrew," he said, "and I have kept track of every one of them."

"The courts are available to reach even a mayor of Chicago who ruthlessly assails a man's reputation for political purposes," interposed Angus Roy Shannon, lawyer, associated in the suit with Busch.

"The Mayor has repeatedly attacked Mr. McAndrew on flimsy grounds, and this suit will demonstrate that such tactics cannot be allowed."

The suit constitutes the former [illegible]ent's second act of re[illegible] against the Mayor and the [illegible] board.

Since the beginning of a trial, instituted by the board against him, alleging insubordination, Mr. McAndrew has maintained a non-committal attitude. Yesterday he took up every specific charge made against him, and entered a list of denials and refutations.

McAndrew became the focal point of an administration attack, friends of the former superintendent pointed out, during the last mayoralty campaign. Although he was tried on the original charge of insubordination, the charge was made to include allegations to the effect that he had inspired or encouraged pro-British propaganda in the classrooms.

CONVICT THREE IN TAG ROW

Three North Side men accused of beating a policeman for giving a parking tag, were convicted in Criminal Court before Judge Ambrose B. Reid of assault and battery. They are C. J. Lenahan, 810 Pennsylvania avenue, Hank Lenahan, 830 Pennsylvania avenue, and Arthur Rense, 1424 Chateau street, each about 36. Patrolman Thomas English, of No. 12 Station, North Side, tagged Hank Lenahan's truck on Pennsylvania avenue May 7 last and the three defendants coming upon him attacked him during an argument about the tag, taking his mace and revolver and dragging him for about 50 feet so that his uniform was badly torn, according to the evidence. A riot call resulted in their arrest. Sentence will be imposed next Friday.

were disposed of in the same manner is being made. So far the operation has been unsuccessful.

Chief of Police James T. Regan, of East Chicago, who is leading the search for the parents and slayers said:

"There is no record of such children being missing in Chicago. Therefore either the boys are from some distant point, victims of kidnapers, or their parents have been thrown into the canal with them.

The boys are described as follows:

No. 1.—Seven years old, weight 70 pounds; wore red stocking cap, high black shoes, buckle tops.

No. 2.—Nine years old, weight 80 pounds; wore blue cap, black lace shoes and overshoes.

Both had brown hair and blue gray eyes. Both wore gray woolen suits, Buster Brown style, with dark gray pearl buttons; black chinchilla coats, lined with red; dark brown leather gloves and silk and wool underwear of excellent quality.

Post mortem examination of the bodies revealed that they were dead before they were thrown into the canal. Faces and heads of the two boys had been beaten in, apparently with some blunt instrument.

Finding of solitary pennies on each of the bodies led the authorities on a search for the mother of the boys as their slayer.

An old Slavic custom is that coins must accompany the body in death.

BLIND SINCE BABY, GIRL, 15, SEES

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 3.—Declared to be hopelessly and permanently blind, and sightless from infancy, Mary Grabowsky, 13-year-old daughter of Walter and Mary Grabowsky, of Coal Center, this county, fooled everybody when she walked out of the Washington Hospital here able to see and with the certainty that her sight, although still impaired, would gradually be restored to her.

A somewhat rare operation performed on the girl's right eye by Dr. J. B. McMurray, of Washington Hospital, is responsible for making her the happiest girl in Washington county today.

The operation was performed a few days ago. Yesterday the bandages were removed and Mary, for the first time in her memory saw daylight and was able to distinguish objects, and persons around her.

Mary's greatest wish, to look upon her mother, and father, will be gratified today when she is taken home by officers of the Red Cross who arranged for the operation. The girl's left eye is hopelessly gone, according to the hospital surgeons, but they say the sight in the right one will become better as she learns to use her new found vision.

When an infant 11 months Mary contracted a skin disease, and abscesses which formed on her eyes quickly rendered her blind. Her father, a poor coal miner, gave her the best medical attention he could afford. Physicians had said that she would never see, and steps had been taken to have her placed in the Western Pennsylvania School for the Blind, at Pittsburgh. But a Catholic priest working among the coal miners interested Red Cross officials, who in turn interested the Washington Hospital officials.

As the gauze was taken from the child's eyes, she slowly lifted her eyes and exclaimed in a tone of awed wonder: "I can see! Oh, I can see!" That's a man," she exclaimed, pointing to a bearded attendant. "And that's a woman," as her gaze fell upon a nurse who stood by her side.

Nagged, He Kills Wife

BRADFORD, Pa., March 3.—Without remorse, W. J. Burnett today admitted he had killed his wife by beating her over the head with a hammer, because "she nagged me."

Mrs. Burnett died shortly after midnight. She never regained consciousness after the attack.

Burnett surrendered immediately to county police, who announced he had made a complete confession. He is 53 and his wife was 46.

"I'm sorry I'm in trouble again, but I am not sorry I hit her," the middle-aged man said, according to police.

"She nagged me into it."

He seemed greatly worried about being in trouble for the second time. A few years ago he served a term in the Little Valley (N. Y.) jail for an attack on a woman. He lived at that time at Lake Geneva, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Burnett came here three days ago from Salamanca, N. Y., and had just established a home. Neighbors had not had an opportunity to meet them. There were constant quarrels in the past three days and the climax came in the quarrel last night.

This quarrel precipitated the hammer attack that led to Mrs. Burnett's death. He will be formally charged with murder today, police said.

concerning the meeting, and was referred to a group of eight or nine persons seated at a table in the dining room with papers spread before them. In the group was C. E. Lesher, executive vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company. Sidney Keller, one of the secretaries of the Chamber of Commerce, was with the group, apparently acting as its secretary. He told the reporter that Wallace was out of the city, and that the members of the special committee had not yet been chosen, but that if the reporter returned in half an hour they might be available.

Later in the afternoon Keller said the personnel of the committee probably would be announced today.

Asked to explain the presence of Vice President Lesher of the Pittsburgh Coal Company at a meeting which was paving the way for the presentation of "a neutral view" of the strike, Keller denied that the meeting had anything to do with the strike. It was just an informal luncheon gathering, he said, and explained that typewritten papers spread upon the table had no significance.

Convicted Once, 2 Go Free

Once convicted of murder in the first degree and under sentence of death, Vincenzo Ciccia and Oreste Delforte, Clairton Italians, today were found not guilty of murder. They went on trial last Monday and the case went to the jury last night, a verdict being returned when court opened today.

The jury retired at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. The defendants were accused of killing Rocco Famia, who was shot in the kitchen of his home, 5113 Lytle street rear, Hazelwood, August 28 last.

The defendants were convicted of first degree murder, with the death penalty fixed, December 17 last, before former Judge Nelson McVicar, but were granted a new trial. The second trial was before Visiting Judge A. B. Smith. Assistant District Attorney A. M. Oliver and Attorney Louis Little are opposing counsel.

The color guard of the advance unit of the R. O. T. C. of the University of Pittsburgh photographed yesterday at special gun firing drill. They are G. W. Gage, J. A. Pearce, W. R. Leis and W. L. Gage.

FINDING RANGE

Here is evidence that the Pitt soldiers do things other than march around the campus. Airplanes cannot be picked from the sky at random, and Theodore and J. W. Braden under the schooled eye of Maj. Horsfall are directing the anti-aircraft artillery.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT "75"

The unit's gun crew snapped in action around the University's 75-millimeter anti-aircraft gun. The crew went through all the maneuvers of handling the gun, except the actual firing yesterday on the campus. The students receive the same training as officers at government schools.

PASTOR GIVES UP AS CANDIDATE

BELLEFONTE, Pa., March 3.—Announcing his belief that he can be of greater service in the pulpit than in the political arena, the Rev. Reed O. Steely, banker-pastor of the Bellefonte Evangelical Church, has withdrawn as a candidate for Legislature on the Republican ticket.

The Rev. Steely reconsidered his previous decision to retire from the ministry and enter a business career, he said. He is president of the Farmers National Bank of Bellefonte.

In the seven years of his pastorate here, the Rev. Steely has seen the membership of his church almost doubled. The length of his service here, it is thought, will preclude his being returned to Bellefonte by the annual conference of the Evangelical Church being held in Berwick, Pa., which he is attending.

"I am willing to take any church the bishop sees fit to give me," said Mr. Steely. His transfer to another post likely would prevent his continuing as working head of the bank.

HOUSE BREAKER GETS FOUR YEARS IN PEN

James Barnett was sentenced to the penitentiary for from two to four years by Judge Joseph M. Swearingen in Criminal Court yesterday for burglary. He was accused of breaking into the home of Joseph Thompson, 100 Boundary street, Clairton, February 16, and stealing watch and $3 in cash.

Girl 'Boy' Nabbed

Disguised as a boy and found attempting to board a freight train in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards near Twenty-seventh street last night, Leona Grannis, 18, of Second street, Braddock, was taken into custody by police and turned over to her parents. The young woman said she left home early yesterday and walked to Pittsburgh. She intended to make her way to California to visit her grandmother.

MARINES DROP 2 IN BATTLE

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, March 3.—(AP.)—American marines scouring northern Nicaragua in search of Sandino rebel forces which clashed with a marine detachment near Daraili on Monday killed one rebel and wounded another in an encounter near Somoto. There were no marine casualties.

The marine patrol, commanded by Lieut. Le Page Cronmiller, of Maryland, and including members of the Nicaragua national guard, encountered a rebel band of 15 men about 20 miles southwest of Ocatal, marine headquarters in the state of Neuvo Segovia.

American patrols are swarming over the Daraili region in an effort to run the rebel forces to earth. Should the Sandino followers venture to leave their hiding places in the mountains it is expected other contacts will result.

The eight Americans wounded in Monday's encounter today were en route to Ocotal by oxcart and plans were made to transfer them to Managua by airplane as soon as possible. In the absence of further information from the scene it is believed that Lem C. Davis, of Nixon, Tex., the most seriously wounded, was recovering. The five men killed in the fight were buried near the scene of the engagement.

U. S. MAY DEPORT CHILD

By Universal Service.

DETROIT, March 3.—Joseph Boyer, millionaire chairman of the board of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company, will care for the bogus child which his son's wife, Mrs. Myron Boyer has passed off for the past four years as their own child, it was revealed yesterday.

A "sizeable" trust fund has been created by him in order to insure the future education and happiness of his pseudo grandson, it was learned from soucres close to the millionaire.

Meanwhile a board of special inquiry of the Federal Immigration Commission is to meet Monday to decide whether the 4-year-old child, which was purchased from an unwed Windsor mother for $20 a few days after its birth, shall be deported.

SUIT BARES DECEPTION

The deception of Mrs. Boyer was revealed with the filing of a suit to expunge the birth certificate. If it had been allowed to stand, the child, Joseph Andrew Boyer, would have inherited the income from a $5,000,000 trust fund created for Myron Boyer by his father.

"I did it in an effort to save my home by giving my husband a son," Mr. Boyer declared. "I am not sorry, because I love this boy just as though he were my own. I would give my life for him any time.

"You can be sure there was no intent of defraud. I knew nothing of the $5,000,000 trust fund which Joseph Boyer had arranged for any offspring of my husband.

"We were married in 1921 and after the first year my husband continually hoped for a child in our home. It was his greatest wish. He wanted a child above everything. Another year passed and I felt that I must do something to save our home.

"I thought this plan of adoption and pretense, intending never to let my husband know the truth, would give him the home he wanted. I made arrangements and went through with it. I told him we were going to have the child and when the time came this little son was 'born' to us.

"Indeed, we were happy. My husband cared for nothing but home and his 'son' for seven months. Then he changed. I believe he had then received his first information of my deception. The subsequent action is a matter of record. I have never discussed it with my husband, nor directly with his father.

"My husband and I have been separated for more than two years, but there has been no talk of divorce between us. My father-in-law has been very considerate and I am very sorry this has come out for his sake. Of course, it was necessary because of the trust fund."

For Theft

MARIE HENNING

Marie Henning, 22, of 501 Sheridan avenue, admitted in Morals Court yesterday that she had taken "pink things" worth $35 form women's wear tables in a downtown department store. She was released under $1,000 bail for further hearing next Wednesday.

PRISON SUNDAY TO BE HELD

"Prison Sunday" will be observed by the local Salvation Army headquarters, in keeping with the nation-wide custom of that organization to conduct services in jails and other institutions, at this time each year. These services are in addition to the regular services at the Second avenue headquarters and its branches.

At 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning Brigadier Franz Duerr, social service district leader, accompanied by the New Kensington Band, will hold exercises in the Allegheny County Workhouse. Special Efforts Secretary Ensign W. B. Fowle will be in charge of the service in the jail. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon Col. Joseph Atkinson, accompanied by Lieutenant Colonel William F. Palmer, of New York City, and an instrumental quartet will conduct exercises in the Western Penitentiary.

GRAND JURY ATTACKS SUSPENDED SENTENCES

WIDOWS' PATCH

The wives and families of men who lost their lives in the Horning mine disaster have been moved out of their homes at Horning No. 4 to a lonely group of houses owned by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation at Horning No. 5, a desolate spot far back from the main road. The "widows' patch" is shown above.

PREFERS BARRACKS

Mrs. Reese Bradburn and her children prefer the union barracks. Bradburn was foreman of the crew trapped in Horning mine two years ago, but was not a member of the union. Mrs. Bradburn collects compensation from the company, but the union provides a roof for her family.

GET WATER SUPPLY

Strikers and their families living in the union barracks at Horning No. 5 have had to carry water from a single house. Twenty-two families live in the row and they were without a water supply of their own until yesterday when plumbers hired by the union ran a water line up to the flimsy wooden shacks they live in now. Throughout the cold winter months, these families have had to carry water a distance of several blocks.

Menjou and Kathryn Carver Plan Wedding in Paris; Both May Make Photoplays There

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 3.

ADOLPHE MENJOU, debonair, dashing screen hero, will wed the fair-haired Kathryn Carver in Paris on May 7. All plans for a Hollywood wedding in the midst of their friends was abandoned when an offer came to the bride-to-be, offering her a starring contract in a series of French pictures. She leaves for New York March 10 and they sail on the Paris March 24.

They will be married in the French capital a month sooner than the day originally set for their nuptials. Mr. Menjou's plans, for the time being, are on the air, so to speak. The option on his contract, held by Paramount, expires April 24. If the film company demand their pound of actor and insist that he resume his picture-making activities, he will return to this country by May 1. If not, he will accept an offer made him to produce pictures abroad. Miss Carver will begin picture-making immediately.

I should call, without an equivocation, Jack Holt's return to Famous Players, a distinct victory for the actor. A few months ago, Paramount decided there was not enough demand for the Wild West thrillers that symbolized the Holt drama. The former pride of the West left the home studio to free-lance. The fans missed his riding in Zane Grey Westerns, and said so. Result, he has been resigned by Famous at $20,000 a picture, and he will make four. I suppose in a few weeks we shall see him rescuing the maiden and riding out to the setting sun on his favorite broncho.

All any actor has to do in Hollywood is to visit a strange studio once and the gossips have him finding a new job for himself. George Bancroft was seen several times in conference with Joseph Schenck and the report circulated like wildfire that the smiling villain of the movies had left Famous. The truth of the matter is Mr. Bancroft has purchased the beach house of Joseph Schenck and his numerous visits were to settle on a price. The Schenck house on the ocean front was one of the first homes to be built by a member of the film colony in Santa Monica. Mr. Schenck now has for neighbors Louis B. Mayer, Jesse L. Lasky, Bebe Daniels, Marion Davies and other leading film lights.

All the way from New York, via the telephone, came Gloria Swanson's voice, denying that the Marquis De La Falaise will remain in France. Gloria says she just received a cable from Henri, saying that he will return to her as soon as possible. She also said that he may be in France a little longer this time because he is trying to arrange his passport so that he need not return to Paris every six months. "I don't even worry about the gossip of our divorce any more," said Gloria. "I expect it." Miss Swanson left yesterday for Hollywood with plans to make her next picture. She wants to do a comedy—the comedy situations in "Sadie Thompson" were so well received she is eager to repeat.

Colored photography has never seemed to me to help tell any motion picture story, yet those who have seen the great event series, being produced by Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus in technicolor say he has color on the screen down to a science. At any rate, these historical short reelers seem to be going very well. The next one is a romantic episode in the life of Sir Walter Raleigh and Queen Elizabeth. You all know Sir Walter is the lad who threw down his coat for the Queen to step on so that her feet would not touch the mud. Dr. Kalmus will call his picture "The Virgin Queen" and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will release it.

If you are one of those people who place your bets on the races you'd never pick out the horse with the name of Funeral Wagon. Sounds ominous and unlucky, doesn't it? Well Funeral Wagon isn't a race horse but he is a thoroughbred who knows his stuff in the movies. He knows it so well that he has been signed by Famous Players-Lasky to play an important part in Zane Grey's next picture, "The Vanishing Pioneer." Zane Grey, by the bye, is on his way from New York to talk business to Funeral Wagon and to tell him what the picture is all about.

Ada Paggi; Aria, "Celeste Aida," from "Aida," Verdi, Mr. Martinelli; "J'Ai Pleure en Reve," Hue, "The Jasmine Door," A. Scott, "La Partida," Alvarez, Mme. Ada Paggi; "The Moon," G. String Quartet in Concert March 17

The last concert of the series of chamber music evenings by the Yost String Quartet will occur on Saturday, March 17, in the Hotel Schenley ballroom. Norman Frauenheim, pianist, is to be a guest artist. This will be the first appearance of Mr. Frauenheim in America since his return from Paris recently. After early study in Pittsburgh, Mr. Frauenheim spent several years under Sigismond Stopowski in New York and in 1925 he went to Paris, where he studied with Lazare-Levy. Within the past two years he has played extensively on the continent and in England. Mr. Frauenheim will controbute a group of piano solos besides joining the quartet in a performance of Dohnanyi's Piano Quintet, Op. 1. The quartet will give a first Pittsburgh hearing of a quartet by Ottorino Rispighi, Italian composer. Members of the Yost Quartet are Gaylord Yost, first violin; Roy Shumaker, second violin; Gary Rosenberg, viola, and James Younger, 'cello.

GILDA GRAY CALLED "THE GOLDEN GIRL"

Gilda Gray added to her earning power as dancer and singer by becoming an actress in motion pictures. Some persons say she is called the Golden Girl because of that. She sometimes is called the Pearl of Poland, too, because she was born in that country, coming to America with her parents at the age of seven.

Her appearance next week in the Stanley will be her first in this city since she made her "million-dollar tour," on which, during engagements of 30 weeks in the larger American cities, the theaters at which she played took in more than a million dollars, it is said.

Pianist

NORMAN FRAUENHEIM

Mr. Frauenheim, Pittsburgh musician who has appeared abroad, is to be guest artist at a concert given by the Yost String Quartet in the Schenley ballroom, March 17.

Prologue from Pagliacci .... Leoncavallo

Mate Culic Dragun.

Joint recitals are always too long, and the one given by Mate Culic Dragun, baritone, and Vladimir Resnikoff, violinist, in Carnegie Music Hall last night was no exception. It threatened to be a Marathon for the audience that kept dwindling for an hour after 10 o'clock.

Dragun is a Jugoslav operatic baritone who comes unheralded yet possesses a powerful voice of almost tenor quality. He could put his songs across by sheer force if it were necessary, and would be interesting if he sang but the folk music of his own country. The group of songs in English was entirely ill-advised, but all artificiality disappeared when he sang the Croatian and Serbian songs. Then his art became genial and his song was worth a dozen Saint-Saens violin concertos.

Of all barren music the concerto programmed last night was as dull a composition as Resnikoff might have chosen to introduce himself to Pittsburgh. Together with the same composer's Havanaise we listened to Saint-Saens at his worst. Resnikoff has agile fingers, intensity, and a forceful bowing arm, but his phrasing is hardly clean cut and I found his tone nearly always unmusical. There was never much to stifle yawns.

Earl Truxell played all accompaniments and was well occupied attending the temperamental rubato of both soloists.

500 MOTORISTS HELD IN ERIE TRAFFIC LAW DRIVE

ERIE, Pa., March 3.—A campaign waged by Erie police against violators of the city parking ordinances has resulted in more than 500 arrests during the last 48 hours, records at the office of Thomas Golden, clerk in the traffic bureau show.

Margaret Anglin plays the role of Lady Fairfax in the all-star cast of George C. Tyler's revival of Victorien Sardou's "Diplomacy," coming to the Nixon Monday for a week's engagement.

So great has been the success of "Broadway" in the Shubert Pitt the past two weeks that it has been arranged to extend the engagement to another week, consequently "Broadway" will remain in the Pitt all next week, announced as the last.

Chilton and Thomas, a pair of Negro dancers, will give an exhibition of eccentric dancing in the Keith-Albee vaudeville portion of the program in the Davis next week. Will Rogers in "A Texas Steer" will be on the screen.

May McVoy plays the principal feminine role in "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson, which will remain in the Olympic for a fourth week, beginning Monday.

TALK ON MUSIC TONIGHT

"Schubert, the Supreme Song Composer," is the subject of the talk to be given at 8:15 o'clock tonight in Carnegie Music Hall by Dr. Charles Heinroth, organist and director of music at Carnegie Institute. This is the second lecture in the series of six talks on music being given by Dr. Heinroth on Saturday nights during Lent. In commemoration of the Schubert centenary the first two have been devoted to that composer. The following songs by Schubert will be used to illustrate the lecture tonight, to be sung by Mrs. Anna Laura Cree, soprano, and Cass Ward Whitney, baritone, Dr. Heinroth accompanying on the piano:

"The Omnipotence," "Ave Maria," "My Peace Thou Art," "The Wanderer," "Hark, Hark, the Lark," "Serenade," "By the Sea," "The Phantom Double."

The program for the free organ recital at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon include: Overture to "Egmont," Beethoven; Canzonetta from Violin Concerto, Tchaikovsky; Chinoiserie, Swinnen; "Peer Gynt" Suite No. 2, Grieg; introduction to third act and "Song of the Rhine Maidens" from "The Dusk of the Gods," Wagner; Piece Heroique, Franck; "Clock Movement," Haydn; symphonic poem, "Finlandia," Sibelius.

J. Friel, of Latrobe. Malkoch was repairing his car on the side of a road when Dr. Friel's car skidded on the icy surface and struck him.

ADMITS HOLDUP AT BAKERY

Admitting that he was one of three men who on November 19 last held up the Duquesne Baking Company office, 222 Auburn street, and fled with $500, Charles Disman, 24, of 7074 Spencer street, was held for court on a charge of robbery by Magistrate John Orie. Disman was identified by President J. D. Williams, at whom a shot was fired, as being the man who guarded the money, while his companions covered the office force. Disman was formerly employed at the plant.

MATE DIES NOW HOME BURNS

The two-story frame dwelling of Mrs. David Stoney, at Leed way and Franklin street, North Side, was destroyed by fire last night with a loss estimated at $4,500. Firemen who responded to the call were delayed in reaching the scene of the fire by a string of freight cars on a Preble avenue crossing which blocked their path.

Mrs. Stoney's husband died two weeks ago. All her furniture and personal effects were lost.

Man Dies Laughing at Chaplin's "Circus"

William F. Sangster, 46-year-old insurance broker from Vancouver, laughed himself to death while viewing Charlie Chaplin's "The Circus," on the screen in the Tivoli Theater in Toronto, according to stories that appeared recently in the theatrical magazine, Variety, and in the Toronto Globe, a daily newspaper.

The Variety story, in part, reads as follows: "'The Circus' caused a man to laugh himself to death and another to laugh himself into the hospital. The lineup at times reached two blocks, four abreast, and the casualties came on the same night, with William Sangster, Vancouver insurance man, being so overcome as to die in his seat before a doctor could reach him."

CUTICURA MAKERS ROUND OUT 50 YRS. IN BUSINESS

MALDEN, Mass., March 3.—The Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation of this city are today announcing in newspapers all over the world the fiftieth anniversary of Cuticura.

Charles L. Hamilton, president of the company, when seen today gave great credit for the world wide success of the business to the use of newspaper advertising. The company has steadily used this means of making known the merit of Cuticura soap, ointment, talcum and shaving stick, until today the name Cuticura is a household word in millions of homes.

ASK BIDS FOR SURVEY OF NEW P. O. SITE

Washington still has in mind the existence of a site at Seventh avenue and Grant street for the proposed new postoffice and Federal building. This was indicated yesterday when notices were posted in the corridor of the present postoffice, Fourth avenue and Smithfield street, seeking bids for a topographical survey and investigation of the site.

Qualified engineers and contractors are invited to submit bids on or before March 15 to the office of the supervising architect, United States Treasury Department, Washington. Specifications for the ground tests can be seen in the office of Capt. George Entrekin, Room 406, Postoffice Building.

Although Congress has not released the funds necessary for the proposed building, the Treasury Department's supervising architect is making preliminary plans for the contemplated structure. Some months ago representatives of the office came to Pittsburgh and consulted heads of various governmental bureaus as to their requirements in the proposed building.

The plans for the topographical survey and ground tests is looked upon by those interested in new building as a favorable indication that Pittsburgh may soon get the much needed building.

ALLEGHENY SCOUTS HONORED BY LEADERS

The former Pittsburgh and South Hills councils, Boy Scouts, now the Allegheny County Council, were awarded certificates of fulfillment at a regional meeting of scout leaders in Richmond, Va., today. These certificates are presented to councils which have complied with the work laid out for them and which have been able to meet financial obligations. Both councils were accorded the same honor the year before, also.

JOSEPH A. VOEGLER

Physicians of the Homeopathic Hospital today said that Sub-Patrolman Joseph A. Voegler, 34, of 1001 Carson street, injured yesterday when he was struck by an automobile while directing traffic, apparently would recover. The accident occurred at Penn and Frankstown avenue when an automobile driven by W. F. Culgen, 27, of 912 West street, Wilkinsburg, skidded after the driver had jammed on the brakes suddenly to avoid striking a woman pedestrian.

POLICE JANITOR HELD UP

J. E. O'Brien of 127 South Nineteenth street, janitor of the Central Police Station, who wears a police uniform, carries a pistol and a badge, was held up and robbed by three Negroes at Second avenue and Brewery street last night. The highwaymen escaped with $47 and O'Brien's revolver.

O'Brien walked to the South Side Police Station and indignantly told officers there of what had occurred. He then went to the city detective bureau and made a similar report.

CANADIAN QUARTER GETS HIM WORKHOUSE TERM

An argument over a Canadian quarter led to the conviction in Criminal Court of John Powell, of 721 Perry street, North Side, for felonious assault and battery. Visiting Judge William T. Darr sentenced him to the workhouse for 1½ to 3 years. Joseph Pauletta, 515 Michigan avenue, was severely cut about the face and neck November 26 in the Hill district during an argument which followed his refusal of the quarter tendered by Powell as part of a 65-cent taxi bill, according to the evidence.

TWO HELD AS OWNERS OF DISORDERLY HOUSE

William Scarpino, 23, and Nick Boxe, 44, said to be the proprietors of the Sun Hotel, Sixth avenue, were arrested last night on charges of keeping a disorderly house and lodged in the Central Police Station. The arrest was made on a warrant issued by Inspector John P. Clancey on information furnished by May Campbell, 28, who was arrested at the hotel Friday.

PURSE SNATCHER HERE OUTRUNS HIS PURSUERS

Pursued by pedestrians in Stanwix street at Liberty avenue last night an unidentified thief escaped after he had snatched a purse from Mrs. G. R. Baird of 2216 St. Luke square, North Side. A description of the fugitive was given police of Central Station and city detectives. The purse contained $7.

THIS store was the first in the city to appreciate the decorative possibilities of the smooth, wide-loom carpets in plain colors, and pioneered in this floor treatment. Now it presents the largest and most complete stocks of these carpets between New York and Chicago.

Wide-loom solid color carpet is ideal for rooms of irregular shape. It is also important in a small room where its smooth, unbroken color helps to create an impression of size. Used with bright Oriental rugs it creates an interesting, rich and beautiful effect in a living room. For these and other reasons decorators are using it widely today.

Our carpet department will gladly measure and get diagrams of your rooms, and, working with our Interior Decorating staff, advise you how to obtain the best decorative effect.

In the wide stocks here are Scotch Chenilles, English, French and the best domestic grade Wiltons. In 9, 12 and 15-feet widths. Chenilles can be ordered any width seamless up to 30 feet. Prices, $6.50 to $15.00 square yard.

Great Bell Recast

ENGLAND'S third largest bell, known as Big Peter, has just been returned to Yorkminster after being recast. It stands eight feet high and weighs nearly eleven tons.

Where Are Girls Who Run Away?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHERE are all the runaway girls?

Do they leave home of their own free will?

Do they return? Or does each lost girl add one more to the list of unsolved mysteries?

"Stories of discontent," writes Capt. Ayer of the Missing Persons Bureau of the New York police, "stories of family hardship, and mostly stories of family quarrels and petty bickerings—that's what we get every day! and from these we try to piece out why Mary ran away, where she has gone and what will become of her."

Capt. Ayer claims that the vast majority of girls who disappear leave home of their free will.

SOMETIMES, of course, there is a man in the case. Not long ago I received a letter from a girl in a tiny village who told me that a "traveling man" promised to find her the "most wonderful position with a big salary" if she would but go with him to the city. This girl was untrained in making her living, obviously illiterate. She knew nothing of the stranger who promised so much except that he seemed a "very fine man."

The awful danger of trusting oneself utterly in travel and arrival in a strange city to an unknown man making wild and extravagant promises is obvious. Evil is in the habit of wearing the disguise of charm. A man with a pleasant manner can sometimes find a girl gullible enough to believe all he says, who will run away from home on the strength of his promises.

Other girls are tempted merely by love of adventure. "I suddenly decided to see the world," explained a pretty school girl who disappeared a year ago, causing a great furore, nearly breaking her parents' hearts. Finally she was found when her money gave out.

INEXPERIENCED runaways are the natural prey of designing men and women. Those lucky enough to find work and shelter often become the "fly-by-night" girls who are such a problem in our cities. They live from hand to mouth, in cheerless hall bedrooms, too proud to write home of their hardships.

"There is always the easy downward grade for the girl shut off from home opportunities," writes Judge Boyle of the New York Children's Court. "And we all know what lies at the end of that road."

Now, it is natural to want to run away. The vast majority of us, if asked what we would do if we suddenly became millionaires, would reply: "Travel."

We tire of the grind. School girls weary of study and exams. We are tempted, especially with the approach of springtime, to throw off responsibilities and "take to the open road."

There are wholesome ways of satisfying this perfectly natural longing. In the first place, you can't get away from yourself. Hard problems of life will await you wherever you go. So, why not face the music bravely, here and now?

IF your family do not appreciate and understand you, neither will the world. Storm and stress of spirit await every girl when she begins to feel deeply and tries to work things out for herself. She rebels against things as they are and longs for a world fashioned more to her liking.

When you feel that way, my suggestion is, don your tramping clothes and take a long walk in the fresh air, up hill and down dale. You will return rested in mind, exhausted of body, ready for a good meal, a good bath, a good night's rest. And things will look better in the morning. Or read a good book of adventure, romance or travel. Plan your next summer vacation. Or go to a constructive play, movie, or concert. Listen in on something diverting and worth while over your radio. Visit a beauty parlor and let them make you look pretty. All these little escapes and outlets for emotion will relieve your mood. Try them and see.

When a young woman is well started in her twenties, and romance does not knock at her door, it is sometimes wise and natural for her to go away to earn her living and seek new faces, new places, with her parents' co-operation. But during your teens and very early twenties remain in the shelter of your home, and make your mother your beloved confidante. You will never regret doing so.

IF, however, you are bound to try the futile, dangerous adventure of running away, and nothing can stop you, this much I beg of you with all my heart. Do not add monstrous cruelty to your unkindness by leaving your father and mother in agonizing ignorance of where you are and whether you are alive or dead. Leave an explanatory letter when you go. And write them from time to time, even though you may not give your address.

In this way, also, you may save lives of other girls. Because so many girls run away from home and disappear, it sometimes happens that when a girl really disappears without intention—is kidnaped, lost or meets with an accident—the public decides, "Oh, well, just another foolish runaway"—and does not make the eager, thorough search that might save her life.

If by any chance you are a runaway, remember, dear, you cannot find peace or happiness in your heart while you are breaking the heart of another. So, even though you cannot return home, write—today and now—to your mother.

Remain at home if you can, and make the most of home affections and duties, then you will better understand how to make a success of your own home, with The Man, when you and he undertake together the great adventure of romance and happy marriage.

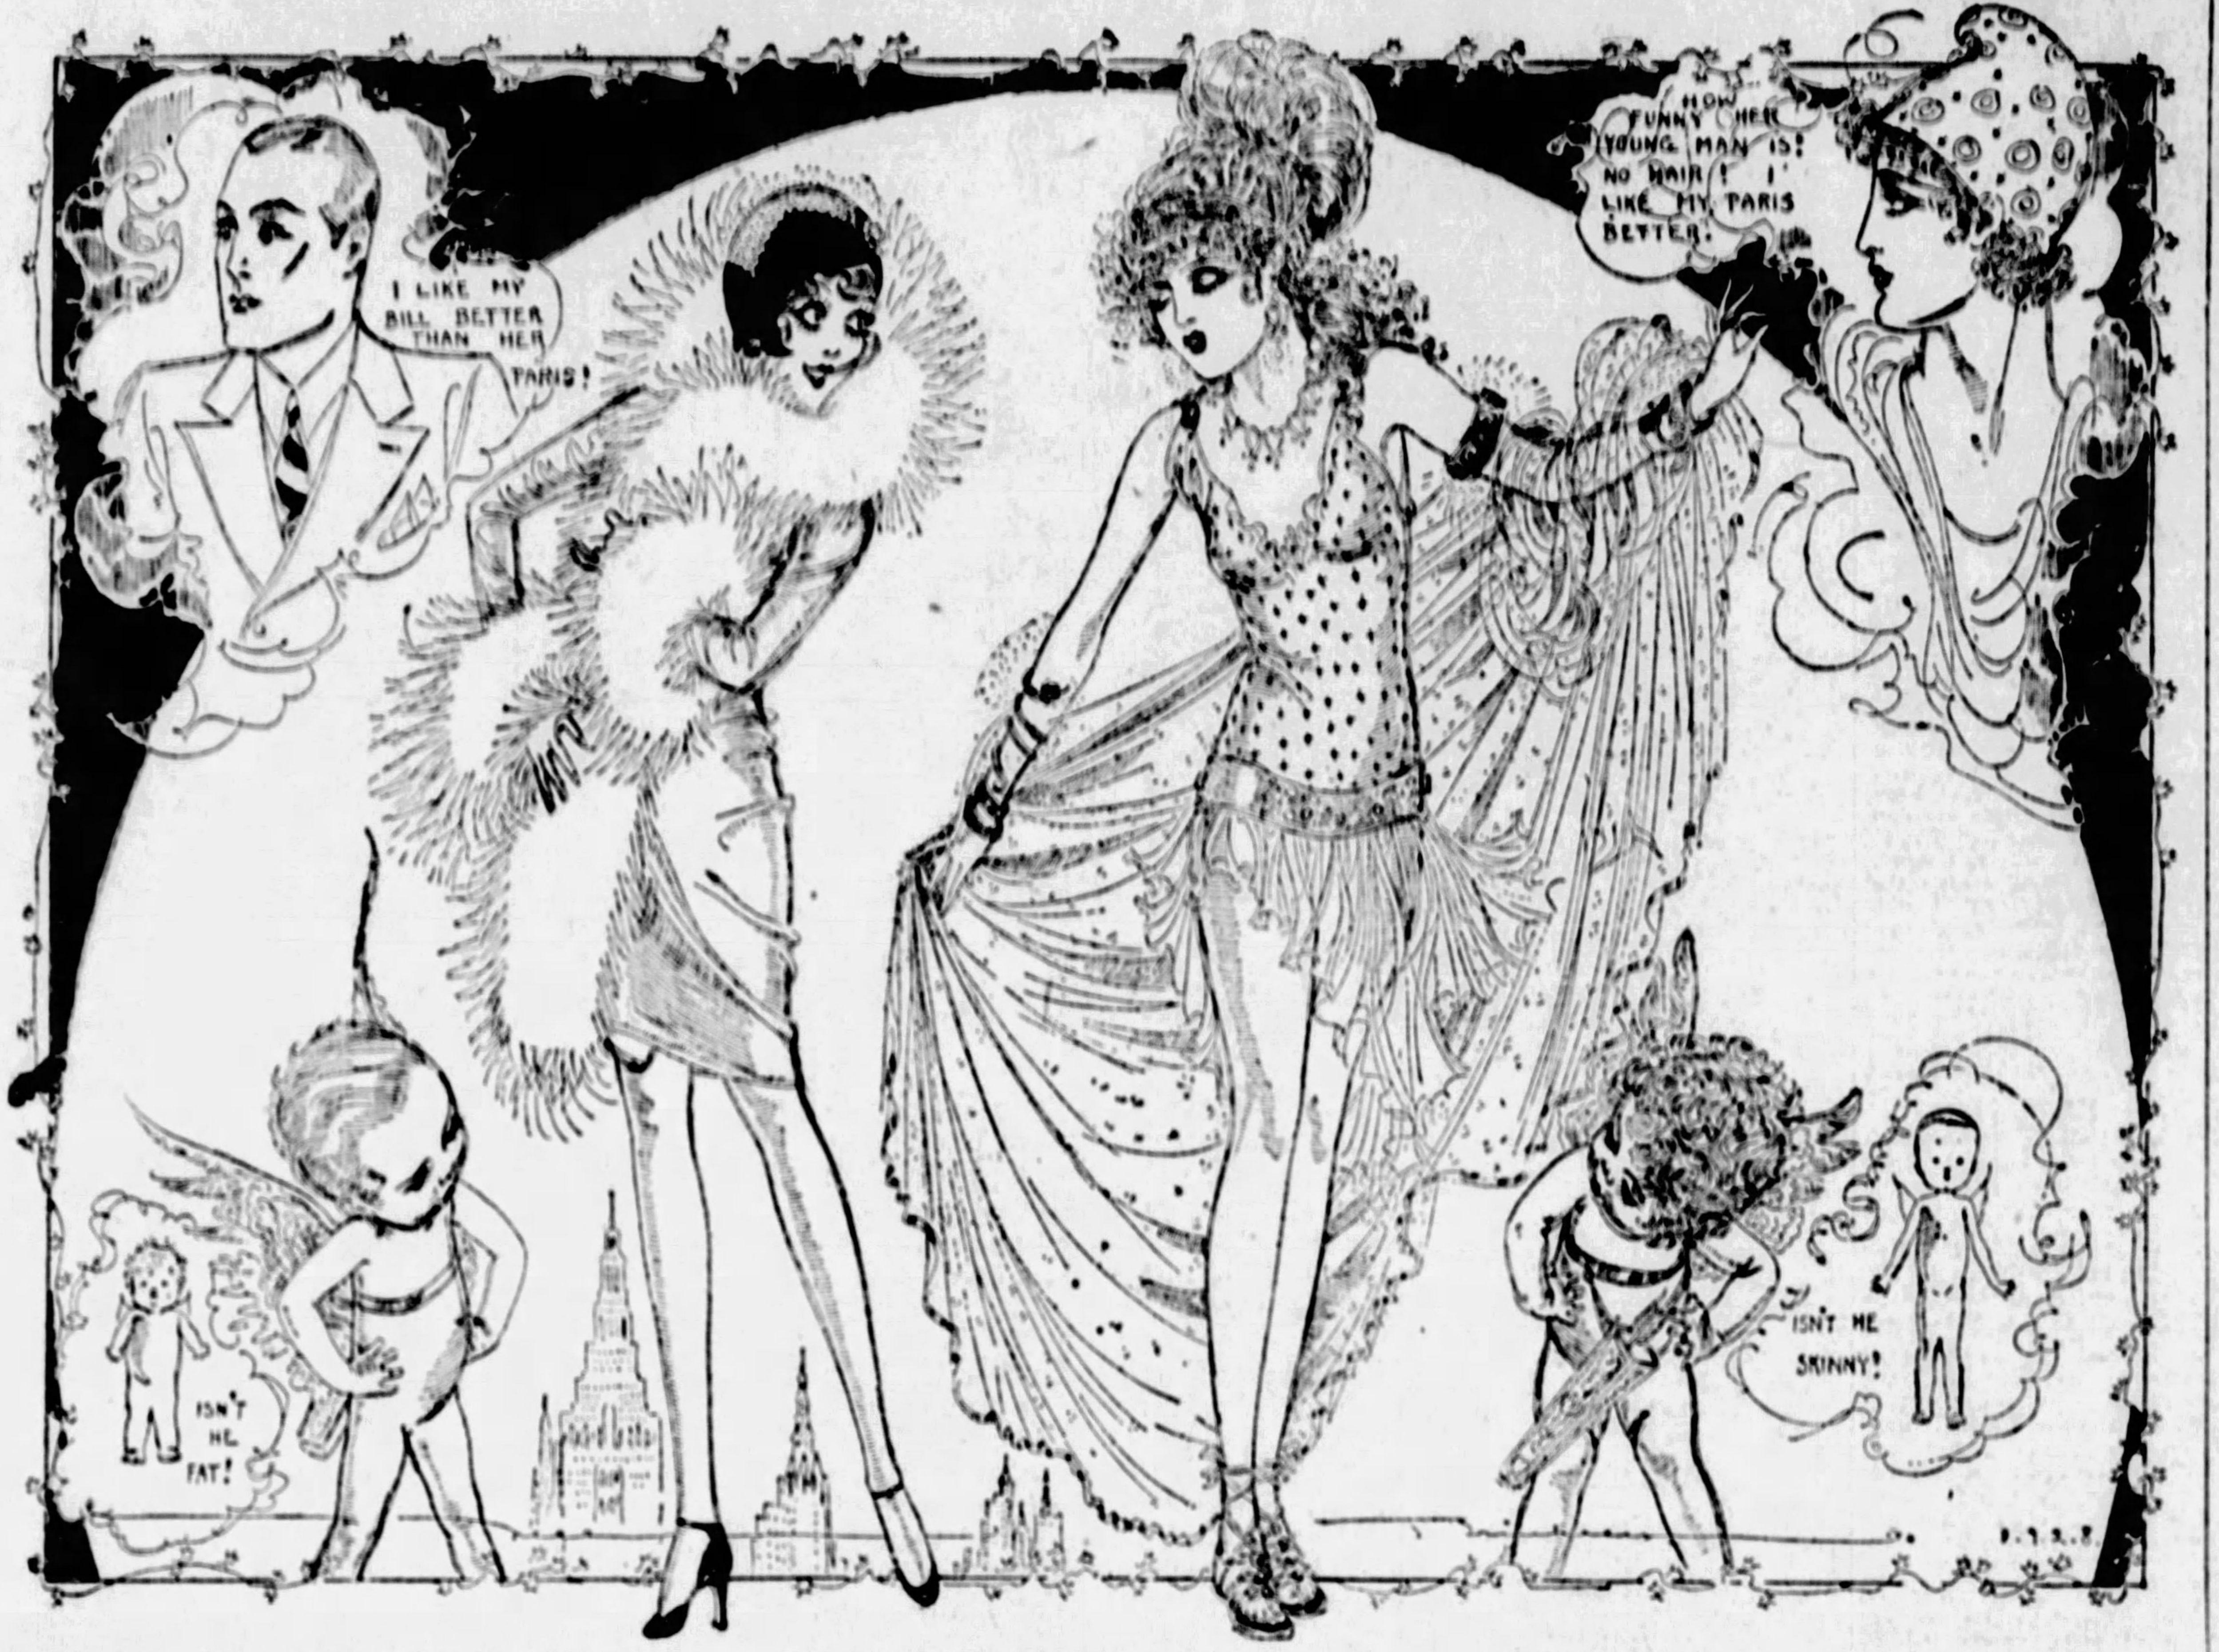
THE TWO HELEN'S, ANCIENT AND MODERN.

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



I LIKE MY BILL BETTER THAN HER PARIS!
HOW FUNNY HER YOUNG MAN IS! NO HAIR! I LIKE MY PARIS BETTER!
ISN'T HE FAT!
ISN'T HE SKINNY!

IF THE antique Helen walked into 1928 what would she think? She was the woman in her day who held the street corners in talk and all Greece breathless over her doings and her beauty. She dances in our minds a confused, glorious vision; a golden woman; a dream of roses and cream and gilt; a perfumed passing that leaves the heart faint; a figure divinely feminine.

What would she think, in her heart that knew "the Gods," white marble streets, chariots, and soldiers with bare legs, metal torsos, and huge Martian brushes flaring over their headgear, of her sister today!

And what would her sister think of her?

BOTH would think one thing of the other. "Isn't she pretty! But doesn't she wear her skirts short!"

Antique Helen would think, "The poor girl has hardly any hair. Poor child; she's terribly thin. What funny shoes, propped up in the back! A pretty headdress, if there was but a bunch of curls in back. What a funny young man she is with. HE, too, has hardly any hair. I like Paris much better!"

And her chubby, oh very chubby Cupid, as he was in those days, would be saying of the modern Dan, "By Zeus! but he is skinny."

Modern Helen would think, "How old-fashioned the person's hair is; all over the place. Lovely jewelry, but it doesn't match. Her legs are too fat. SHE certainly doesn't burden herself with clothes! I wonder if her face DID launch a thousand ships. And isn't Paris a long-nosed young man? Those curls on his neck! My, I like my Bill much better."

And her wiry young Cupid would be saying to himself of the other Eros, the ancient, "My Gosh, isn't he fat!"

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Treatment To Improve One's Nose

By MARIA JERITZA

A BROKEN-HEARTED young woman has written to me, in language forcible if not elegant, "My nose is the most awfullest-looking thing for any girl to possess—and I don't mean maybe."

She adds that its ugliness is ruining her chances of happiness, and asks information about plastic surgeons.

If you earn your own living, my dear, you will have to save a long time, I fear, before you can collect sufficient money to have your nose made over by plastic surgery. Even then, the operation may not prove practicable in your case.

But be sure to choose a registered surgeon of unquestioned standing to do the work, or you may ruin your appearance for life. The cost is likely to reach at least $500.

THERE are, however, less expensive ways than plastic surgery of improving the nose. Enlarged, choked pores, leading to blackheads, are sometimes caused by coating the nose too thickly with powder. Do not whitewash your nose with a thick coating of white powder. Use the natural tint of your skin, whether it be flesh, cream or rachel powder and apply it lightly, evenly, with a clean powder puff.

Often the nose shines because it is a fleshy part of the face, hence oily. In that case bathe it with hot water, then with the following tonic astringent, which, by the way, is cooling and beneficial for summer use on the entire complexion:

Bitter almond water, 4 ounces; orange flower water, 4 ounces; glycerine, 2 ounces; boric acid, 1 dram.

This tonic is a sufficient base for powder.

A RED nose may result from indigestion, poor circulation, or alcoholic drinks. Eliminate rich, greasy food from your diet and eat more fruit and fresh vegetables if your nose is red and inclined to shine. Tight waist-bands, garters, arm-holes or brassieres may cause a red nose.

Whether your nose is Grecian, retrousse, Roman or just plain plebian, you can improve its appearance by giving it intelligent daily care and selecting the style of hat, coiffure, ear-rings, beads and neckline that bring out its best points and neutralize defects.

Phosphorous' Important Part in Bodily Health

I HAVE already spoken to you about the importance of iron and lime in the diet. It is important, not alone for growing children to have a sufficient mineral supply, but it is almost as important for grown people to have it.

DR COPELAND

One of the important minerals is phosphorus. The only time most people think of phosphorus is when they want a match.

There is an old-fashioned notion that eating fish will supply the phosphorus for the brain and nervous system. There are other foods which carry phosphorus and just as much of this important element. Of these I shall speak more at length in a few moments.

At this time I desire to impress upon you the necessity of having your full supply of this element. It is essential to the tiny cells of the body. You all know that the body is made up of minute cells. Phosphorus has an important part in the foundation structure of the cells. Also it is needed for the multiplication of these cells.

It forms a large part of the bony structure. Also, it is a most essential part of the liquid part of the blood, as well as the other fluids of the body. Perhaps the most active function of phosphorus may be said to be its work in aiding the glands and their products.

While eggs and milk are richest in phosphorus, it is also found in meat, cheese, whole wheat, dried beans, almonds, peanuts, walnuts, etc. Study a table of food values and find where each of the essential minerals can be found.

Magnesia, soda, potash and chlorine are all found in meat, fresh vegetables and the salt with which you season your food. They are needed to supply the needs of the body.

Many persons suffer from hyperacidity. In fact there is never a day but my mail is full of inquiries as to how to overcome this trouble. One cause for this condition may be that you eat too much salt. This combines with certain elements found in the gastric juices and the combination results in an excessive amount of hydrochloric acid.

The need of iodine in the system is one that cannot be overlooked. If there is a lack of this, immediately there is a disturbance of the glands, particularly of the thyroid gland. But I shall go more into detail about this disturbance another time.

Today I want to impress upon you a few of the many reasons why your daily diet should include plenty of fresh fruits, vegetables, meats, fish, fresh poultry, cereals, milk and all the mineral carrying foods.

Horoscopes

Sunday, March 4

You must sacrifice the little thing of today in order to gain the big thing of tomorrow.—ANON.

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows an inclination toward gaining one's point by subterfuge and craft or by secret machinations. Beware the element of fraud and deceit.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year in which the subtle and the underhand will figure largely in the affairs. Be on guard against craft and fraud.

A child born on this day may be inclined to and subject to secret ways and acts, through these means attaining what success it may achieve.

Monday, March 5

The solar configuration with Venus may accentuate the pleasures and pastimes of this day, whereas the adverse aspect with Luna and Sol may make employment and other activities difficult to handle. Obstacles and complications are shown.

Those whose birthday it is may have a pleasant year rather than a profitable one. There may be obstacles and perplexities to deal with. A child born on this day may incline toward pleasant ways and personal indulgences rather than the serious activities of life.

MAN, WIFE HELD IN ARSON PLOT

Charged with having attempted to convert a $300 investment in second-hand furniture into $4,000 by means of a fire, Paul Simoni, 30, and his wife, Mrs. Martha Simoni, 16, of Swissvale, are held in the Allegheny county jail on charges of arson.

When questioned yesterday, Fire Marshal Thomas L. Pfarr and Assistant District Attorney Ralph Park say that Mrs. Simoni admitted to them that her husband had set fire to furniture in a dwelling at 1030 Sixth avenue, North Braddock, late last Monday. The reputed confession avers that Simoni and his wife went for an automobile ride after the blaze had begun and returned early Tuesday morning.

The fire marshal said that in anticipation of receiving insurance money as a result of the fire Simoni had rented an expensive apartment in Collingwood avenue, Swissvale.

Investigation disclosed that 15 gallons of gasoline had been used to start the blaze, Pfarr said.

Twenty-one persons were indicted for murder, and the ignored bills included four cases in which County Commissioner C. C. McGovern was the prosecutor as former controller.

The jury sat during 18 working days. O. S. McClure, of Wilkinsburg, was foreman.

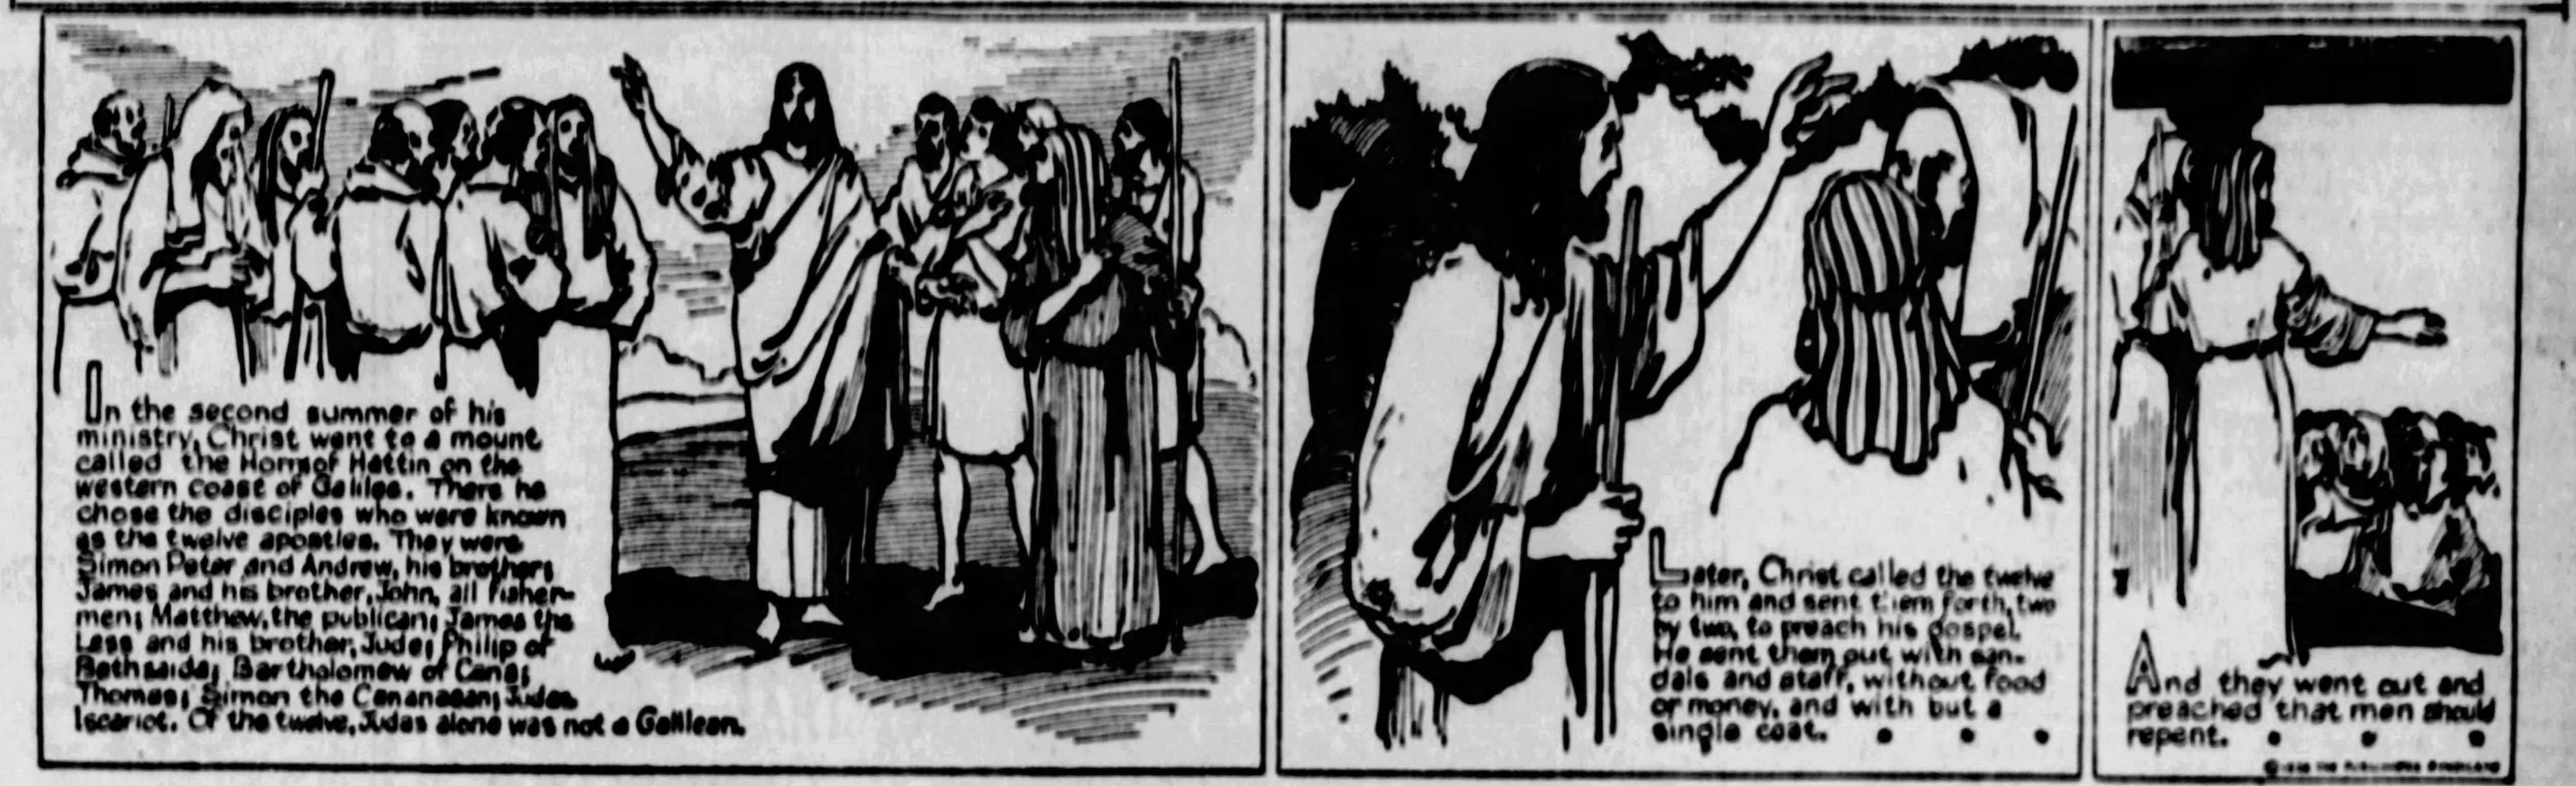
CHOOSING THE APOSTLES

Sunday School Lesson

Mark 1:16-20; 2:13, 14; 3:13-19; 6:7-13, 30.

By } Harlowe R. Hoyt
Walter Scott



On the second summer of his ministry, Christ went to a mount called the Horns of Hattin on the western coast of Galilee. There he chose the disciples who were known as the twelve apostles. They were Simon Peter and Andrew, his brother; James and his brother, John, all fishermen; Matthew, the publican; James the Less and his brother, Jude; Philip of Bethsaida; Bartholomew of Cana; Thomas; Simon the Canannaean; Judas Iscariot. Of the twelve, Judas alone was not a Galilean.
Later, Christ called the twelve to him and sent them forth, two by two, to preach his gospel. He sent them out with sandals and staff, without food or money, and with but a single coat. . . .
And they went out and preached that men should repent. . . .

The removal was made on petition of Jail Physician C. J. Ellis. SEE FAIR SAILING OF MOTHERS' BILL

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The Gold Star Mothers' bill, providing for a pilgrimage to France this summer of the mothers of America's soldier dead, has been assured of prompt and sympathetic consideration in the Senate.

After a conference with Senator Wagner (Dem.) of New York, chairman Reed of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, announced that the measure will be taken up by the committee next Friday, preparatory to reporting it to the Senate.

The bill has already passed the House and thus far no vestige of opposition to its passage has arisen in the Senate. For that reason the committee may be able to consider the bill and make its report without the necessity of holding public hearings. Indications are that it will be approved by the committee in exactly the same form in which it passed the House.

Unless a legislative jam ties up the Senate, sponsors of the bill believe that its passage by that body within the next few weeks may reasonably be expected. President Coolidge is expected to give it his prompt approval.

Senator Wagner, one of its most ardent supporters, said:

"I have every expectation of prompt action by the Senate on this bill. It will be a great pilgrimage of peace."

'BRING ON YOUR FUELLESS MOTORS!'

If "fuelless motors" are possible, now is the time for them to be demonstrated before the world and the leading scientists of the country will invite inventors everywhere to come forward and receive their reward.

This was the decision of American men of science at their meeting yesterday in New York, when they declared the motor invented by Lester J. Hendershot of Elizabeth to be worthless. Today a questionnaire for world-wide circulation is being prepared inviting scientific bodies, governments and individuals to investigate all devices for operating motors by natural energy.

F. W. Hochstetter, Pittsburgh scientist, who declared Hendershot's invention spurious, on his return from the New York meeting today, said he had been authorized to prepare the questionnaire and broadcast it at once.

ASK INSTITUTE TO MAKE TEST OF ROAD

City officials Monday will ask E. R. Weidlein, director of Mellon Institute, to confer with them and discuss proposed tests of materials used in the Mount Washington roadway, it was announced last night after a conference between President of Council James F. Malone, Director Edward G. Lang, of the Public Works Department, and C. M. Reppert, chief engineer of the works department.

If the institute has special equipment needed to make the tests, it may be asked to do so. If not, a technical laboratory group will probably be engaged.

COAST SUSPECT NAMED IN RING

The last suspect in an auto-stealing ring that operated in the Shenango Valley three years ago was in the county jail today, awaiting trial in Federal Court on a charge of transporting and concealing stolen cars.

Frank Balbine, of Sharon, was returned from Sacramento, Cal., by United States deputy marshall yesterday.

Ten of the ring, indicted with Balbine in 1925, have been convicted and most of them are in the Federal Penitentiary.

It is planned to eventually abandon the lower Union mills at Youngstown, which are older-type units and more costly in their operation.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Social Set Observes Off Season With Pleasure Jaunts

THERE is a certain amount of traveling and visiting going on all the year round, I suppose, but it does seem to me that just now almost everyone is either leaving on pleasure jaunts or is entertaining guests from other cities. The South attracts most of the travelers, of course, but the cities on the Atlantic seaboard are also luring many Pittsburghers away from home.

Down Sewickley way, there is quite a lot of this traveling back and forth of late. On Tuesday Mrs. Owen Davies Odell and her daughter, Sally, of Thorn street, left to spend about six weeks in Miami, while the Van Lear P. Shrivers left just today for Augusta, Ga., where they will be for about a fortnight.

Miss Ethel Christy, of Frederick avenue, is, I hear, spending two weeks in New York, and Mrs. Ralph W. Harbison, of Pine road, is there, too. Mrs. Harbison, however, just left on Thursday and expects to spend only the week-end there. And Mrs. James Barlowe Cullum, Jr., of Broad street, went East on Tuesday. She is going to visit friends in Pottstown and in Philadelphia before she comes back home.

Mrs. James W. Cree, Jr., of Chestnut road, has been in Atlantic City with her mother for the past two weeks, and on Thursday night her husband left Sewickley to join them there.

There is, too, a visitor in Sewickley. She is Miss Marjorie Chittenden, of Madison, Conn., and she is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Morgan H. Bowman, of Chestnut street. There will be, probably, quite a few parties for her during her stay in the Valley.

Other travelers are the Edward J. Schellentragers, of the Schenley apartments. They have left by motor through the South for six weeks. Thursday they spent the day with their son and daughter-in-law, the John A. Schellentragers, at Chevy Chase, Washington, and yesterday morning they left for Savannah. They expect to arrive at Palm Beach Tuesday and will stay there for some time. Later they will visit at Miami Beach, and when they leave there they will tour the central part of the state, stopping with friends at Winter Haven, Orlando and Clearwater.

There is to be a dinner given tonight in New York by Mrs. Theodosia Shaler Reynolds, of West Seventy-ninth street, when she will make formal announcement of the engagement of her daughter, Theodosia Shaler, to Hubert Vincent Davis, son of the late Dr. Hubert Davis, noted London physician and surgeon. Theodosia is a daughter of the late Harry Gibson Shaler, of Pittsburgh, and her grandfather was the eminent Dr. Nathaniel Shaler, former dean of Harvard University. She was a popular debutante in New York and Washington, and she divides her time between the two cities. She was graduated from the King-Smith studio school in Washington with the highest honors obtainable, after receiving her preliminary education in Morel de Fos of Paris and Brilliantmont, in Lausanne, Switzerland. Mr. Davis is a member of the faculty of the Hill School in Pottstown.

The wedding is scheduled, I understand, for the last week in June, in St. Bartholomew's Church, New York. An interesting touch will be added by the fact that Dr. August King-Smith, well-known composer, will write special music for the wedding and will come to New York to preside at the organ.

Mrs. C. A. Plotner, of Cincinnati, entertained with a shower Tuesday night in honor of her niece, Miss Margaret L. Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Brown, of East Liberty, whose marriage to Charles H. Weight, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Weight, of Wilkinsburg, will be solemnized April 4.

The marriage of Miss Mathilda C. Sonnenfelt, daughter of Frank Sonnenfelt, of the East End, and Harry A. Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Floyd Walker, of Shaw avenue, McKeesport, will be solemnized tonight at 8 o'clock in the German Evangelical Protestant Church, Smithfield street, by the Rev. Dr. Carl A. Voss. The bride will wear an ensemble of honey beige and her flowers will be orchids and lilies of the valley. Her maid of honor, Miss Mildred E. Weimer, of McKeesport, will appear in an ensemble of rust velvet with a corsage of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Robert M. Sharp, of McKeesport, will be best man. After an eastern trip, Mr. and Mrs. Walker will live in McKeesport.

Miss Martha Maclheson, of Coraopolis, and Miss Alfadene McClister, of Ambridge, are entertaining with a bridge luncheon today in McCreery's in honor of Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Roll, of Coraopolis, whose marriage to H. Russell Weller, of Buffalo, will be solemnized next Saturday. There were 12 guests, and the appointments were in orchid and yellow.

* * *

Mrs. E. O. Pearson, of Moorhead place, entertained with a luncheon and a dinner Thursday in her home in honor of the seventy-second birthday anniversary of her mother, Mrs. J. W. Righter. About 20 friends from the Second Methodist Protestant Church, of which Mr. Righter was pastor, attended the luncheon, and 16 of Mrs. Righter's oldest friends were guests at the dinner. Dr. and Mrs. Pearson are planning to hold a housewarming in their new home next Saturday. They will entertain for their friends as well as those of their son, Grosvenor Pearson, and daughter, Edna Pearson.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. J. Add Sprowles, of [illegible], have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary Elizabeth Sprowles, and Walter Scott Spragg, of Bethesda, Md., and St. Petersburg, Fla., which was solemnized Tuesday in Jacksonville, Fla.

The Pittsburgh Alumnae Association of the Kappa Delta fraternity will hold a get-together party March [illegible] in Oppenheim-Collins' auditorium, with alumnae and active members and their mothers and friends invited. Dr. Helen Gillmore is chairman, assisted by Miss Gladys Gourley and Miss Helen Clinch.

COLLEGE CLUB TOLD OF RESEARCH WORK

Some of the 62 fields of research, in which Mellon Institute is pioneer in such work, is engaged, were discussed yesterday by Dr. E. R. Weidlein, its director, at the College Club's weekly meeting. Dr. Weidlein's subject was "The Economic Value of Industrial Research" and this value, which he said is for the good of all humanity, he summed up as "cheaper and better and newer products, the extension of human life and putting within reach of nearly everyone articles which were once considered luxuries."

Foreign countries are doing more for industrial research than is the United States, Dr. Weidlein stated, describing some of the institutions which are working in England, France, Belgium and Italy. These countries, he said, are going to depend upon their research work in chemistry to build up a national independence and to regain their former prosperity. Since they have comparatively no outlet within themselves it may mean that they will combine and compete with the United States—a menace which is lessened by the fact that they rarely agree.

Industrial research is not magic, Dr. Weidlein declared, it is business done in a business-like way, with the work well organized and laid out. In the last 25 years progress in industrial research has been marvelous and yet the surface has been no more than scratched. He pointed out that there is no decrease in industry where scientific methods have been adopted, but that capital and labor have gone hand in hand at every turn.

The usual tea followed Dr. Weidlein's talk.

The proceeds will be used in furthering the philanthropic work of the organization.

JERRY The Epic of a Girl Who Had to Wait · by Elenore MEHERIN

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Jerry King, good-looking, charming and 19, meets Saxon Rhodes, a young architect, and falls in love with him at first sight. Her fascinating mother, Marza, warns her that idealists like Saxon make unsatisfactory husbands. In spite of the fact that Jerry sees Saxon kissing Tess Willi, who has a great deal of money, she still clings to her ideal and refuses a marriage proposal from Heine Ross, a wealthy young suitor. Saxon runs across her while she is sketching and later they kiss each other rapturously in the moonlight. He takes her to lunch and Tess Willi comes to their table and makes a date with Saxon.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

THE girl would plead: "What can she say to trouble you so? Why do you read the letters? Oh, you must love her violently."

Marza would only answer: "Don't bother. Come here, my blue-eyed pet, and kiss me. Why should you bother? She is very, very unhappy. That is all."

Now Marza looked as she looked in those solemn, awful moods. "Oh," thought the girl, "she loved and lost. And nothing in life makes up for that. 'Terrible—terrible'"

Abruptly Marza spoke: "I hope you're not counting on marrying Saxon?"

"Have a heart, Marza! I know my onions But why should you hope that? He's delectable, if you ask me."

"But not thinking of marriage. You will only break your heart."

"Once in a while we hear of a marriage today, Marza. I could quote you seven or seventy June brides if you wish to hear. The institution isn't quite passe as t.

"Saxon Rhodes hasn't money enough to marry. But, what is worse for you, should you be vaguely dreaming of it, he hasn't the wish to marry. Young men today have lost the urge.

"What can the apartment house marriage of today give that freedom doesn't? Nothing, my pet, but burdens and sameness. Besides, he is off on a weekend with Tess."

"I know! We met her at tea this afternoon," said the girl lightly.

She was glad Marza's back was turned; glad no one saw the red flame in her cheeks.

"I'll not see him any more!" she kept repeating hotly.

And then she was running to the door—opening a box. Not from Heinie—not from Bud!

Who was sending flowers today! Lost chivalry!

He hands flew for the note. And the next moment, almost with a song of happiness, she read:

"I'd rather be under the summer moon tonight with the one who doesn't—the sweet one who doesn't—than with the hundred who do. Yours now and tomorrow. Saxon.

CHAPTER VII.

SHE had wondered and wondered about this strange, dynamic force—love.

Twice she had thought it hers. Now she knew.

She took Saxon's note and ran into her room, reading it over, though the words were singing in her heart. No one since the world began had ever known such inspired sweetness. Never, in all the loving of men, had words thrilling as these been spoken.

She laughed softly and pressed the roses to her lips. "Oh, I love him, I love him," she whispered, and could have gone on saying this endlessly, laughing and pressing the roses against her face.

She carried them to the living room, arranged them on the table. She wondered if Marza had ever felt quite such a shine and tumult; ever heard such heavenly music.

"Lovely," said Marza.

With a lilt that flew out before she could check it: "Saxon sent them!"

"Lovely, lovely," said Marza again, looking at the roses sadly.

"She doesn't want me to have it," thought the girl, baffled.

Marza, to whom love had brought such vital gifts, was now begrudging it to her own child. Why?

Jerry had seen love sweep up in Marza like a flame, making her eyes brilliant and her voice a song.

A long while since she had first seen this. It was that summer, eleven years now, when Stephen Marsh stopped for a visit, just before her father died.

They had taken a house up in the hills of Los Gatos. The girl remembered the visitor, Stephen Marsh, vividly. He was very tall with dark brown hair frosted at the temples, but young and a laughing, lordly fellow.

He had given Jerry a bracelet with silver bangles—oh, dozen of them that tinkled when she moved her wrist. She liked that. She was just past nine then.

One day her father called her peevishly. He was ill—dying of tuberculosis. He'd not been well since that time in the Ural Mountains, where he was gone so long. A brilliant mining engineer—George King.

But his last year he spent travelling about in a fury of resentment that life and this young, beautiful woman who was his wife were both escaping him.

He called Jerry to his chair. "Go out in the garden. Sit with your mother. It's nice and sunny out there. Stay until Mr. Marsh leaves."

The little girl ran from him, not liking his bony hand. And guessing, as a child will, that he was angry with Marza—very mean about something. She went to her mother's room, intending to hide.

Through the open window two inches from her, came a voice—Stephen's voice: "Oh, Marza, six years of this! How much longer?"

Marza reached up with her white, slim hand and covered Stephen's lips. He took her hand as though it was a flower and crushed it to him. He said hoarsely: "Damnable—Marza!"

Then Marza asked some eager question.

"Yes—yes?" Stephen answered. "I've seen her—the angel."

Suddenly they were both laughing. And when Marza came in her eyes were lighted. They were like lights dancing.

Jerry never saw Stephen after that brief hour.

In a little while her father died. One day she lost the bracelet and was heartbroken. Then she asked about Stephen, and if he might be coming again. Marza got terribly white. She said: "He's not coming any more! He's gone far away," and she ran into her room, locking the door.

For two years it was very quiet. People were surprised that Marza grieved so. One day Jerry heard two of her mother's friends talking. One said to the other: "I didn't think she cared a snap for him. You never can tell! Who'd ever have pictured Marza King going into solitary confinement for that weazened tyrant—George King!"

Then Earl Brooks, whom Jerry had adored, came. He wanted to marry Marza He was rich, and they would all go to Europe, and Jerry would be sent to school to a convent in Paris.

Earl had talked to the little girl and had asked her how she'd like that And didn't she think he'd make a nice daddy?

But Marza wouldn't marry him. And Earl, too, went away.

There were other men. Things became joyous, with people laughing all the time. Marza, especially. Except when those letters began coming from Chicago.

But most of the time there were gay crowds in the living room. They sang; or they sat smoking

WHY WE BEHAVE LIKE HUMAN BEINGS

By GEORGE A. DORSEY, PH. D., LL. D.

Control of Human Life Attainable; Experiments Changing Sex Character Have Radical Possibilities

That sex is a fundamental element of all higher life was made plain in yesterday's chapter of "Why We Behave Like Human Beings" in The Sun-Telegraph. The psychology of the "impurity complex" and the practical purpose of sex externals were presented in manner to be comrehended by all readers.

Complexities of Woman's Life

CHAPTER 21.

EXPERIMENTS on chickens show that when the ovaries are completely removed from a young hen, she begins to take on secondary sexual characters of the male: she develops comb, wattles, and spurs; her plumage becomes more brilliant; she grows larger; she takes on the typical behavior of the rooster. This can only mean that the ovary itself, by its own internal secretion taken up into the blood stream, has power to modify the body in the direction of the female sex. It has been inferred that secondary male characters were potentially present in the hen, but were inhibited by the ovaries.

GEORGE A. DORSEY

Moore implanted a piece of ovary in a young male guinea-pig. His body was modified. His behavior showed no sign of acquired feminine instincts. Another investigator reports "timid, shy, and mothering-the-young" behavior of a guinea-pig thus altered. But all investigators agree that the male gonad transplanted into an altered young female leads to change in both body and behavior. She becomes aggressive, quarrelsome, and behaves like a typical male toward other males and toward females in general. Her physical modification is equally profound.

Effects of Transplanting

The ovary can be transplanted from one part of the body to another; it long continues to function as an endocrine gland, no femininity is lost, nor does the lunar cycle cease. When transplanted from one body to another it may form blood connections, but it eventually degenerates. But as long as a piece of it remains alive in its new hostess her sex life, including lunar cycle, continues "normal."

For transplantation purposes a bit is as good as the entire ovary. Where, then, does its hormone come from? It produces one. Carlson thinks probably several. None has yet been isolated or can be detected in the human blood. But Allen and Doisy claim to have isolated a mammalian ovary hormone which resembles the long-desired "love potion" of romance and literature. "Female animals treated with it take the initiative in courtship, even at an early age." Injected into young animals, they "become mature before they normally would."

This hormone is an "extract of the contents" of the Graafian follicles. Why not? It is all plausible. Nothing seems more certain than that the sex impulse and all secondary sexual characters in all mammalian females are dependent upon the normal functioning of the ovaries. The physiological and anatomical changes in the Graafian follicles during the life cycles are both profound and significant. As they are the source of the ova, it is reasonable to suppose that they carry the control of sex impulse or behavior and the acquired secondary characters.

Much Yet to Learn

When the follicle erupts and discharges the ovum, it becomes the corpus luteum. When the corpus luteum is destroyed, pregnancy ends and ovulation is resumed. Hence the inference that the corpus luteum is responsible for uterine changes leading to the implantation of the embryo and for the early growth of the fetus. When corpora lutea are fed to hens, they lay no eggs; hence the inference that during pregnancy they inhibit the ripening of the Graafian follicle and so prevent ovulation and restrain the sex impulse.

They influence the mammary glands, but the development of these during pregnancy is believed to be due to hormones from the fetus to the maternal blood. The mammae themselves are not known to have any endocrine function. Their removal does not prevent child-bearing or have any other effect than "psychic and cosmetic," according to Carlson. But removal of the ovary is removal of feminine nature.

No mammals below primates have anything approaching the specific lunar cycle of a woman's life between puberty and the menopause. . . . It is essentially a human process regulated by the normal and mature ovum, but its function is not yet understood, nor is there agreement as to just what takes place or why there is such wide range of individual variation. The climacteric is reached when no more Graafian follicles mature.

May Control Life

Disordered sex life—except the menopause—in woman may be due to other than ovarian deficiencies: other endocrines may be involved, perhaps the adrenals or the pituitary. It is not certain that ovarian extracts are anything but extracts and so of possible value only through suggestion. Nor can luteal extracts check human ovulation; the corpus luteum can. Nor is it at all certain that any ovarian extracts on the market contain any hormone. It is certain that the normal ovary, through its hormones, functions for all secondary female characters and has the specific sex functions for such distant organs as uterus, placenta and mammae.

The functions of personal incubation assumed by one-half of the race ages ago necessitated an elaborate internal mechanism. For its perfect functioning, elaborate and complicated controls were necessary

It follows, and is biologically inevitable, that the sex life of the female of the human species is far more complex than is that of the male. But it is biologically conceivable that in a no great distant future reproduction in the human species can be radically altered.

Under such controlled breeding, the ovaries of only physically sound individuals would be used and to the limit of their 200 ova; these would be fertilized artificially and developed in man-made incubators. Such control of human life seems quite attainable; much more so than the synthesis of life in any form.

LORAIN, O., March 3.—Fire which early today swept through the heart of the business district here destroyed 10 stores, damaged three large buildings and caused a loss of upwards of $300,000.

Lorain and Elyria (O.) fire departments battled the flames, which for a time threatened to wipe out the entire business section.

Five firemen were reported injured, one seriously, in the battle to curb the blaze. Herman Kopke, the most seriously injured fell from a ladder when overcome by smoke and was taken to a hospital where his condition was said to be critical.

Among the stores and buildings destroyed were the Century Building, the Lorain Banking Company, the Newark Shoe Store, Liberal Credit Clothing Company, Bracken Realty Company, Nuxons Bakery and the Craft Drug Store.

CARRY POLICE ROW TO COURT

Mandamus proceedings to prevent Burgess Clyde Kearns, of Hays, from repeatedly discharging Clyde Kearns, the borough's lone policeman, who has been hired by Council and fired by the burgess three times, were instituted in Common Pleas Court today by John E. Laughlin, borough solicitor.

"The burgess has Kearns' badge and he cannot officially function without it," Attorney Laughlin told Judge James H. Gray.

"Well, you folks will be in Pittsburgh before long and you won't be troubled by such controversies," remarked Judge Gray.

He fixed next Friday morning as the date for a hearing.

Will Can't Grasp Hays' Liberty Bond Story

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 3.—My old friend Will Hays took Patrick Henry's old phrase and cleaned up on it. "Give me Liberty Bonds or give me checks." Bill says he got $260,000 but give some of it back.

WILL ROGERS

As bad as I felt I had to laugh at that one. Then he says he got it back again, that sounds more plausible. Then he says he gave back some more that brings on another doubt. Then he says he held the other but didn't want to use it. He is resorting to fiction again.

Finally Sinclair was so flabbergasted at Will returning any of it that he took it and gave to the Democrats where he knew none of it would ever come back.

Just a sore headed voter that didn't get any of it.

WILL ROGERS.

SIDE-WALKS OF PITTSBURGH

By HAVEY J. BOYLE

MET Paddy Carney, recently-elected president of the Lotus Club, a South Side organization of long and historic standing. He told about the great dinner the club gave to its life members the other evening. Elmer Barchfeld, son of the late Congressman A. J. Barchfeld, was toastmaster, and County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong was the principal speaker. The historic files of the club show that among noted visitors in the realm of politics were the late Senator Boies Penrose, Senator Quay and many others.

BOY! WAS THAT A DINNER?
GOOD EH!

THE Lotus Club's steward is Harry Lochbaum, who can do more tricks with a turkey than Thurston. In telling of the dinner Paddy Carney was still rolling his eyes, rubbing his stomach, and those other things that people do when recounting how they got the best of a great dinner.

A MAN recently walked into an automobile store and purchased a new car right off the floor, as the salesmen say. He gave a check, which after some scrutiny, was accepted. Let's say he paid $1,500 for the car.

The purchaser then drove to another town where he stopped at an automobile salesroom and offered to trade his new car in at half price for another car costing about $1,500. The dealer was dubious. He asked how the purchaser would pay the balance. "By check," said the purchaser. "But your check may not be good." "Well," said the purchaser, "I just gave a check for my new car here and you can call up and ask the man I bought the car from if my check is all right." The dealer acted on the suggestion.

THE first auto man, upon hearing that his recent customer, after giving a check was now ready to make a disadvantageous trade, became dubious about the check left with him.

Said Dealer No. 1 to Dealer No. 2: "That fellow must be a crook. Have him arrested." This was done. The check given the first dealer came back o. k. And now the customer is suing for false arrest, defamation of character and a few other things, and the auto dealers in question will likely have to "settle" to avoid a lawsuit which they undoubtedly will lose if the case gets into court.

THE customer was a slicker, of course, but he had worked out a scheme which may make him dishonest money, using the law to aid him in the swindle. Is this a new racket?

* * *

THE slickers have rare schemes. A woman recently walked into a downtown store and purchased a fur coat for $1,000. She gave the clerk a $1,000 bill. The clerk explained that bills of that size must be first taken to the bank for examination. The lady grew indignant. She was pacified temporarily until the bill was taken to the bank where it was pronounced good. The clerk then told the customer that she could have the coat. But the lady had changed her mind. She would not deal in a store that questioned her honesty. She walked out, leaving the coat.

$1000.00 SALE
YOU MAY KEEP YOUR COAT!

TWO days later a man visited the same store. Had a lady been [illegible] recently to look at a $1,000 coat? Well, he smiled [illegible]ably, he would like to buy the coat for her. The truth of the [illegible] was that the lady really wanted the coat, but her pride would [illegible] her come back. Would the store now sell the same coat to the [illegible] Certainly. The man then extracted a $1,000 bill from his wall[illegible] marking: "I want to surprise her. So this morning I went in[illegible] pocketbook, took the money she had laid aside for this coat, a[illegible] tonight she will have the coat."

The sale was made, the man walked off with the coat, b[illegible] nately the $1,000 bill the man gave the clerk happened to [illegible] fait.

JERRY The Epic of a Girl Who Had to Wait · by Elenore MEHERIN

and talking about the most exciting things till late—ever so late.

Marza let Jerry sit up with them.

Other nights Marza pinned orchids on her shoulder and went down the hall with that hushed, happy laughing, the man who was in love with her helping Marza to a machine.

And the eager, watching girl at the window. The glow and joy of Marza's face. Love meant this to her—kept her young with all that vital arrogance.

Why did she not want Jerry to know it?

"But don't you think Saxon magnificent?" said the girl abruptly, as though they had not dropped the subject. "Don't you think him handsomer than any man of the present day?"

She laughed merrily and blew a kiss to Marza because she felt so high and joyous.

Marza smiled. Then her lips trembled. The girl was so very dear to her—dewy and lovely.

"I think Saxon delightful. Not handsome. Certainly not! Why, pet, he has a pug nose and quite a noticeable jaw."

"But I love a fighting face! And eyes that are full of lights. Oh, sister, he's entrancing! You know he is! But you think I'm in love, don't you? And that I'm hanging my heart to the sour apple tree like an old-time mid-Victorian."

"You are mid-Victorian to be dreaming of marrying Saxon. You think I'm against him. Not at all! I see his charm. I like him immensely. But I know his mood. Even though he loves you as you hope he does, he's not ready to marry. And he won't. I don't want you to wrong him and crush yourself by taking the gaiety he offers too solemnly."

Said Jerry, her chin resting on her hunched knees, her straight, childish arms wound about them, "Are you thinking I may spring a shotgun wedding on you! What a thrill if I did!"

She no longer cared what Marza might answer. She was recalling Saxon's teasing eyes, turned happily to hers over the plans for the Spanish bungalow: "You, Jerry, on one side of that fireplace—I on the other!"

So, he, too, had pictured them dwelling together in a dream of gladness. Imagine a little house like that among the trees—they two loving always.

She went in and wrote him a long, bright letter, full of the audacious kid sweetness he adored.

"You liked it, did you?" he asked Monday night when they met again.

She answered impudently, "Did you give Tess any darling ones this trip?"

"No—snooty ones. What kind did you give Heinie?"

"None — that is, technically none."

She grew abruptly silent and gazed into the dark pool of water. It was a summer night in late August, nearly six months since the moonlit spring when they first kissed.

Hushed here—a wilderness in the midst of the city—this secluded tree-girt reservoir on the crest of Hyde and Lombard.

They were just across from Jerry's home. She could see the lights in Marza's bedroom. But they might have been in an island forest, so remote were they in thought and feeling from all other souls on the earth.

"You sighed, Jerry, when you said that. Why?"

She shook her head slowly and remained gazing dreamily at the water.

Then he said—affected by the poetry of the night, and the wistful droop of her head: "Oh, Jerry, what is it you're wanting so hungrily from life? That you think it's worth refusal of all the lesser joys that are so beguiling along the way? And how will the dream, if it ever comes, be deeper or richer because you've spurned the sweets as you go?"

"It's just an ideal, Saxon. You want to see one person—the person you adore, apart from all others. You want to share it all with just one—with one alone. So that this experience shall be unique with no taint of other lips; no echo from other voices—a supreme, untouchable emotion.

"Oh, I'm a glutton, Saxon. I don't want mere sense thrills—the kind of thing any butcher's boy can feel. I want love—real love—a shiny, immortal thing that picks you up, mind and soul and body and carries you to the ends of eternity. When I love it shall be like this — utterly — madly—oh . . ."

"Jerry—you're loving now."

"Yes—you!"

CHAPTER VIII.

SAXON RHODES sat on a high stool before his draughting board. He worked with mechanical precision. The smile on his face had nothing to do with his work.

But with a warm, delicious memory—the memory of little brown hands, soft and silky as flowers curling in his, and the fierce young sweetness of that, "Yes, I'm loving now—YOU!"

All day this loitered in his thoughts happily like a tune. She loved him—she would follow to the ends of the earth—always. She was his, this flame-sweet, flower-eyed Jerry. If he cared to claim her.

His heart flushed on the image of her in that poignant moment—the way she had been standing gazing in the pool, the wistful droop of her head. Suddenly blazing into life, reaching her hands to him in that dear, husky avowal.

Lovely as a dream—all tenderness and fire. His—if he wanted her, and he did! Piercingly. Wanted her just as she stood on the hill last night, young, passionate, beautiful—like that always.

He began to picture her. What was she doing now? Slumped deep in a chair, head against a cushion, thinking. Of him? Remembering things and smiling?

Or would she be moving about in that dining room that faced the water—setting the table for one, propping a book against the sugar bowl? If Marza was going out for dinner, as most probably she was, Jerry would eat alone.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

A Stormy Session in the Kitchen Threatens the Dinner

MY question to Katie as to whether she "could spare Jim for 10 minutes" was no sooner out of my mouth than I regretted the words in which I had couched it, although it was a natural phrasing, because Katie was responsible for the dinner which she was preparing and which she would have to serve in another half hour.

But it gave Katie altogether too wide latitude for the caustic comment which her tempestuous look told me she was eager to hurl at Jim.

"Spare dot Jeem for 10 minutes," she answered with her nose in the air. "Take heem for 10 days eef you vant. Maybe he some use to you. He no good round here—dot boonch—"

But at her first words I had beaten a hasty retreat through the kitchen door, and Jim had as hurriedly followed me. I had murmured something about being in a great hurry, but Jim had said nothing at all, simply moved with significant alacrity away from the vicinity of his shrewdish wife. Thus the ultimate insult of which Katie is capable, the appellation of "boonch of soup greens" to those in her disfavor, did not reach us in its full venom.

But Jim knew that she was uttering it, was aware also that I shared his knowledge, and the consciousness suddenly broke down the wall of shyness, behind which he generally hides.

"You hear that, Mrs. Graham?" he choked, stopping suddenly and towering above me with a face so convulsed with anger and humiliation that I hardly knew it. "You hear what she calls me when I've tried to help her all day and get my own work done in between times, anyway? What's a man goin' to do when a wife shames him like that before folks? I can't stand it, I tell you. I'll have to get out and stay out."

The intensity of his anger made me realize that an emergency confronted me. If I did not wish my dinner party to be utterly marred not only by poor service, but by a painful domestic scene, I must get matters straightened out before Jim went back into the kitchen. For an exasperated second or two, I renounced all feminism and longed for the days when it was lawful for an irate husband to use a stick no thicker than his thumb in the correction of his recreant spouse. If ever a woman needed such discipline, it was my tempestuous little maid, whose tantrums, at first enjoyed by Jim because of their whimsicality and picturesqueness, were now becoming shrewish.

I saw that Jim was too angry for any appeal save one—that of his chivalric devotion to our family and his pride in us.

"I'm so sorry, Jim," I said earnestly, "and I think perhaps it wouldn't be a bad thing for you to go away for a few days' visit without telling Katie anything of your plan. You really have spoiled her, and she is acting abominably. But for my sake and Mr. Graham's won't you try to control your anger, just for tonight? I am especially anxious to have this dinner go off well, and if Katie gets any more excited than she is, I am afraid we shall have an explosion instead of a dinner."

Purposely I laughed lightly as I finished, and after a mental struggle reflected in his honest face, the shadow of an answering grin twisted Jim's lips.

"She is terrible excited," he said, the habitual loyalty of years triumphing over his anger. "And I suppose I do fuss her up awful when she's got a dinner on like this. I'm so slew and she's so quick."

MONEY LOVE

Lily Finds That Love for Pat Is Stronger Than Money and Is Happy

SHE knew that she had. She had bungled everything for a year and more than a year.

She could look back upon it all now and see just where she had made her first mistake. . . . When she had decided to marry Staley Drummond's money.

Nothing had been right since. Nothing. Her love of money had made all of her unhappiness. She could see it now with great clearness.

Money wasn't so greatly to be wished for, after all, then, was it? It was a convenient and wonderful thing to have, of course. But it couldn't buy anything really worth while—health or friendship or happiness or love.

"Love," thought Lily, and that brought her back to Pat.

If she left the brown-shuttered house tomorrow, she probably never would see him again, except by accident. He wouldn't contest the divorce suit that she had begun—and some day she would go to court and be told that she was no longer the wife of Patrick France, but plain Lily Lexington again.

The street was in darkness when she turned into it, driving the dusty, rain-spotted car, and as she turned in at the driveway of the brown-shuttered house she saw that there was a bright light burning in Pat's room.

"He's worse!" she thought, with a painful twist of her heart, and as she jumped out of the automobile and ran across the porch it seemed as if she had known for a long time that Pat was going to die. There was no surprise in her mind, just terror and grief.

Sobbing, she threw open the front door and rushed up the stairs. "This is the end of the world for me!" she thought, wildly. "If he's dead—"

At the top of the stairs Elizabeth Ertz met her. She was as calm-browed as usual, and in her hands she held the tea tray upon which Pat had his meals.

"What's the matter?" she asked softly, and as she spoke Pat's voice came from the bedroom behind her.

"I'd like the sport pages of tonight's paper, Elizabeth," he called.

Oh, he was all right then! He wasn't dead or dying. . . . The relief in Lily's heart was so great that it was almost joy.

She collapsed on the top step of the stairs, and began to cry frantically, while Elizabeth Ertz stood over her and begged her to be sensible, in a whisper. They were not letting Pat know that she was in the house.

"You're going to say goodby to him, aren't you, for Pete's sake?" Florence asked that night, when they were all at supper in the neat, cozy dining room.

Lily, shaking her head, thanked her lucky stars that she would not have to eat another meal in that house, where she knew she wasn't wanted and wasn't liked.

She could feel Mrs. France's eyes on her as she answered. "No, there's no reason why I should even let him know I was here," she said, simply. "I came because I couldn't stay away—and there's no use in my denying it. But that doesn't change anything. I'm going right ahead with my divorce."

She saw Elizabeth draw a long breath, and she knew that Elizabeth was glad to hear her say that. In spite of all her sensible talk on the subject of Pat, it was perfectly clear to anyone who botherd to watch her that Elizabeth was still in love with Pat. The way she fixed his trays of food, alone, gave her away.

And, from the hall where she was sweeping or folding linen in the big chest, Lily could hear her talking to him sometimes — and every word was like a caress.

"Well, you've been a great help to us, anyway, while you were here," Mrs. France said suddenly and amazingly. "With me busy in the store most of the time, and Florence downtown in the job, Elizabeth just couldn't have taken care of Pat. I must say, now that it's all over, we were glad you were here, although the neighbors must have thought it was funny—" She sighed. Her neighbors were a great source of interest to Mrs. France, whose whole world centered around the brown-shuttered house and the street where it stood.

"It is an interesting place, too." The thought that came to Lily the next morning while she was packing to go home.

Now that she was leaving the little place, she realized how full a life the people in the brown-shuttered house lived. By comparison, the house on Montpelier road seemed very dull, indeed, as she looked forward to endless months and years spent in it.

"Elizabeth!" Pat's voice broke in upon her thoughts. "Elizabeth! I've dropped my pencil and my paper—Elizabeth!"

There was dead silence in the house for a minute while he waited for her to answer him, and while Lily wondered where she could have gone.

"Elizabeth!" he called, and then there was a sound of his bedsprings creaking, as he moved. Lily heard him make a tired sound in his throat, and then he said something under his breath.

"He knows he mustn't get out of bed," she thought. But evidently that was what he was getting ready to do—and he simply must not do it! The doctor had explained to all of them how important it was that he should not get out of bed for at least another week.

A second later Lily stood in the doorway. Pat had been drawing something on a large piece of paper fastened to his mother's bread board by glass tacks, and the board had slipped to the floor, taking paper and pencils with it. He was drawing his bathrobe on as if he were intending to get out of bed.

"Where do you think you're going?" Lily asked him, as he pulled himself up against the pillows.

He turned his head and, without a word, looked up at her with unbelieving eyes. He did not seem to be able to realize that she was there. He opened his lips as if he were going to say something, and then he closed them again. His white face went a shade whiter.

"It's all right, Pat. It's just me," said Lily, without expression in her voice, and with a fine disregard for perfect English.

She came farther into the room and picked up the breadboard, the pencils and the sheet of drawing paper. Her eyes took in the familiar lines and circles that he had been drawing upon it.

"Another piston ring?" she asked, laying the board down upon his knees.

"Yeah," said Pat. "This one is going to be a cracker-jack, though."

He spoke in an ordinary tone, but his eyes never moved from her face as she came up to him and then backed away. She saw him swallow hard once or twice.

"What are you doing here?" he asked, after a minute.

Lily shrugged her shoulders as if it were the most ordinary thing imaginable for her to be here in the house of her enemies. "Oh, I've been here a long time," she said, airily. "Ever since you were taken sick, in fact. I've been helping Elizabeth take care of you. She's a wonderful nurse, Pat, and an awfully nice girl. I'm sorry for all the nasty things I used to say about her—" She choked up and couldn't finish the sentence.

"Well, how did you happen to come down here, though?" Pat wanted to know, still looking at her as if he couldn't believe his eyes.

Once more Lily shrugged. "I knew you were sick—" she managed to blurt out, and then she went down on her knees beside the bed and began to cry.

"Oh, you've been so sick—I thought you were going to die—" she sobbed, forgetting that Elizabeth Ertz always said that cheerfulness was the first rule of the sickroom.

She felt Pat's thin, fine hand on her hair. "Don't cry," he said. "I promise not to die—"

Without her telling him anything more than she had, he seemed to understand just what had happened.

"You like me after all, don't you, you gold-digger?" he said, trying to be casual and light about it. "Hold up your face so that I can see you. . . . You do like me after all, don't you? Answer me!"

"Don't look at me," Lily begged. "I've been dusting and cleaning—and I'm so dirty—"

Pat tilted her face up to him. "You DO look dirty," he said. "And there are a lot of other things about you that some people might not like. . . . But I like you, anyway."

And he kissed her. "Just let me catch you running around with Staley Drummond again, though," he said, presently. "You were a bad wife, and if I had any brains I wouldn't take you back. I'd make you get your divorce and then you'd marry him and his money."

She shook her head. "Not me," she said. "Really, I hate money lately—now that I've seen how terrible it can be when you like it too well—"

"Don't talk about it," Pat answered. "You'll like it plenty when I make a lot of it for you with that new million-dollar piston ring of mine, won't you? You'll—like—it—fine!" And he kissed her between each word, to show her that he meant exactly what he said.

FOR THE LOVELORN

Doubtful Less

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your wonderful advice in the Lovelorn and I am now coming to you for some. I am a young girl in my teens and I have been going with a young man whom I love dearly, and he also tells me that he loves me. Now my mother and father do not know that I and this boy are in love, although he boards with us. Now, Miss Gale, we are thinking of getting married in the near future, but he has not asked my parents for my company, as we are almost sure they will object. Now, Miss Gale, here is another problem: One night I was at an entertainment and as this boy friends of mine was not here I went with my sister and while there I met another boy and he asked me to walk with him to the ice cream parlor, so I went and my sister and her boy friend went also. While going I met my boy friend and he did not say anything until I got home, then he got angry with me for being with this boy and I told him that I could walk with any boy unless I was engaged to him. He calls himself engaged to me, although he has not given me a ring. Do you think he should ask my parents first? If they say "no" would you advise us to go against their will? Please don't tell me to forget him, for I cannot.

DOUBTFUL LESS

Your parents should certainly be told about matters, my dear. You are too young to be thinking of such a step as marriage, especially without the advice of older people. Unless you are really engaged to this boy, he has no right to dictate your friendships, although, of course, an engagement doesn't depend on the giving of a ring.

Why

DEAR MISS GALE:

This is my first time to write to you and I hope it is successful. I am a freshman in high school. I am as popular as the average girl. The girl's all treat me nicely and the boys are as nice as I could desire during school. Now this is my trouble: When there is anything going on I am left out. I don't have the nerve to push myself in as some girls do. I have never had a date which I am proud to say, but sometime there is a doing where the boys take the girls. I am not bad looking and dress nicely so that they could not be ashamed of my appearance. Miss Gale, please tell me how I can become better acquainted with the girls and boys. It hurts terribly to be left out.

WHY

Perhaps you are too self-conscious to be really friendly, my dear. Try to forget yourself and be interested in what others do and say, and they will be sure to like you.

Daisy

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have written to you several times and have received excellent advice. But now I have a problem which appears hard to me. I am considered good looking and only 14. But listen. All my girl friends have dates and go places, having good times but I never am asked to go any place. I have plenty of girl friends and the boys seem nice only they won't ask me for a date. You will immediately say I am too young to go out with fellows. But all my friends do, and when my parents approve, why shouldn't I? Sincerely,

DAISY.

You shouldn't, my dear, just because you are too young. I am sorry your parents feel it is all right for you, but I cannot agree.

HELEN ROWLAND

For, verily, verily, stars and inspiring women shine only in fair weather. They must be followed and looked up to and admired from afar.

But a devoted wife and a compass require only to be handled with a little gentleness, to go on forever. And in times of storm and danger, they are at a man's right hand to comfort and guide him.

Go to. The fool keepeth one eye upon the stars and one eye upon his compass. But the wise man chooseth between them and abideth by his choice.

For he that seeketh a brilliant woman, who stirreth his imagination and exciteth his fancy, shall find his course full of tempests and high winds and emotional cloudbursts, and dangerous undercurrents. But he shall never know boredom!

He shall dream dreams and see visions and sail upon strange and thrilling high seas toward the Land of His Heart's Desire. But he shall never know peace of mind.

And he that weddeth a steadying and devoted woman shall steer his ship of Fate in a safe and placid course, and cast anchor at last in the Harbor of Content.

But he shall never hit the High Spots, or know the thrill of adventure! And his days shall be peaceful but full of dullness.

Then ask me not, wherefore a man yearneth for TWO WOMEN in his life. For every man believeth in his heart that he requireth at least two soul-mates;

* * *

One to stimulate him—and one to steady him.

One to save his soul—and one to save his pennies.

One to uplift him—and one to hold him down to earth.

One to inspire him—and one to soothe and comfort him.

One to intoxicate him—and one to cure his headaches.

One to be his Guiding Star—and one to be his Compass.

* * *

Yet, whichsoever he weddeth, he yearneth all the days of his life for the Other One!

THE WAY TO PIVOT

Manager Donie Bush, who was some shucks as a shortstop when he performed for the Detroit Tigers against the Pirates in the world series of 1909, is seen above showing Shortstop Dick Bartell and Second Baseman Joe Cronin the proper way to pivot at the second sack in making a double play.

COMOROSKY MAY GET OUTFIELD JOB

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

SOME special orders given to the players in the baseball training camps this spring by the Cincinnati club and other big league organizations draws attention to an item of expense in the operation of a team in the major circuits that is generally given very little notice by the fans on the outside. That is the cost of the baseballs used during the course of a season.

Jack Hendricks.

The impression prevails in some quarters that the various clubs get these balls gratis from the manufacturers, but this is incorrect.

IT IS true that the National League, for instance, has made contracts for the use of a certain kind of ball in return for which "official adoption" and its advertising value the makers agreed to supply the league with baseballs free of cost.

However, the clubs do not get the balls from the league for nothing.

On the contrary each club is required to pay the league $1.30 for each ball it uses during the course of a pennant race.

SOME of the clubs are beginning to complain of waste in this connection.

Manager Jack Hendricks of the Reds, for one, has notified his players that they used more balls than any other club in the league last season and that they must be more careful with them this year.

"If you want to autograph a new ball for a friend, pay the club trainer $1.30 for it," he wrote into the 1928 code of club rules. "That is just what they cost the ball club. Any one caught taking a new ball away will be fined $25. Giving away balls costs the club plenty of money."

OFFICE records of the Pittsburgh club show that the cost of baseballs used by the Pirates and their opponents at Forbes Field (the home club supplies the balls for championship games under the rules) has been mounting from year to year, particularly since the rabbit ball, through being hit out of the lot or being scuffed against the concrete, came into the pastime.

Barney Dreyfuss

At what figures would you estimate the cost of balls in the pennant battles fought here in a season? It will be surprising to most fans, no doubt, but the books of President Barney Dreyfuss show

BUSH MAY USE POLE IN LEFT FIELD

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent

PASO ROBLES, March 3.—With all positions clinched except left field, the Pirates offer small speculation for the fans. As Donie Bush this morning led his players to another day of batting and fielding the only new developments concerned left field and a Pittsburgh boy who has begun to feature the daily workouts.

Bush is giving Adam Comorosky marked attention. Donie says that Pete Scott is destined to start the season as a catcher, the left field fight, therefore narrowing to two or possibly three, players. Comorosky looks like the most promising athlete for the job with Pooch Barnhart and Joe Harris as dangerous rivals.

The Polish member gave a good imitation of Hans Wagner yesterday as he raced around the bases on several occasions. Commy, apparently, realizes his opportunity and he is out to make the most of it.

The latest camp sensation is Regis Leheny, young giant of Oakland. Regis registered a bull's eye yesterday. The lefthander took off his wraps and plasters and proceeded to make the majority of the Hooligans saw the air wildly in their futile attempts to get their bats against his fast ball and curve.

Leheny apparently has been holding out. He caught a cold in his side a few days ago and naturally favored the ailment to some extent. Evidently he figures it is up to him to show something and when Bush called him to the hill to pitch to the batters in the afternoon he let fly

Red Chapman May Not Fight Again

By HARRY KECK,
Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

RED CHAPMAN may never box again. The Pittsburgh product, who fought his way to fame in New England rings and only last year boxed Benny Bass for the world featherweight title in Philadelphia, has not battled since he scored a sensational one-round knockout over Tommy Crowley of the South Side at Motor Square Garden several months ago, and, according to word received here by his brother, his ring career may be ended.

Chapman is suffering from the same trouble as Jack Dempsey—an injury to one of his eyes. Specialists have been working on him and have not given him much encouragement. Unless they can relieve the condition they may advise him not to box any more at the risk of going blind.

Chapman is one of the hard luck geniuses of the ring. A good boxer and a knockout hitter, he has been held back by the series of injuries. Just before he knocked out Crowley, he missed a swing and fell to the floor of the ring, along with Crowley, and injured his right shoulder. Almost immediately after getting up he put over the finishing punch. His arm then went lame on him and he had to have it treated before leaving town and placed in a cast for a month on his return to Boston. Then the eye began to bother him, and, as a result, he has not been in action since. The eye condition dates back to his bout with Bass, in which he was butted and had a severe cut opened over the optic.

Rickard and Getz May Build Arena in Chicago

NEW YORK, March 3.—(INS.)—Tex Rickard has announced that he is "favorably inclined" to join George F. Getz, Chicago business man, in the promotion of a sports arena in the Windy City, modeled along the lines of Madison Square Garden. Rickard and Getz collaborated in the promotion of the last Tunney-Dempsey fight in Chicago and Tex has declared himself as being highly impressed with the acumen of the Chicago man.

"I consider him the smartest man in the field of promotion," Rickard said, in making his announcement. "He has asked me about tying up with him in the promotion of an arena in Chicago, and while I didn't definitely commit myself, I don't mind saying that I think we will get together on this project.

"He is looking up the site and making other preliminary arrangements and, when these are completed, we probably will have something more definite to announce."

CHILLY SAUCE

Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

PASO ROBLES, March 3.—The fences of the Paso Robles ball orchard are still unblemished; not a drive has been sent soaring over the ramparts by any of Bush's nifty sluggers in the many sessions held to date. A lot of groaning and swinging has been in evidence, but the fence has still to be correctly measured.

APPARENTLY the balls do not have as much rabbit as they did three years ago. On the other hand the rockets go farther in a game than they do in the warm-up sessions. The pitcher puts more on the sphere and the batter seems to get more power in his drives when there is something at stake.

ONE of the many Pirate rookies, name deleted, let loose of a fast one in a fanning bee last night. The subject of wine was being discussed when this yearling informed his pals of the diamond that "we have seven barrels of wine at home."

"You're not going to drink all that, are you? asked another bright lad.

"We're not going to drink any of it, "retorted the first rookie. "We sell it."

IF it weren't for Oil Smith there would be few sidelights in camp.

PANTHERS INVADE MOUNTAINEER LAIR TONIGHT

By JESS CARVER.
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., March 3.—A snow storm and a potential avalanche struck this mountain city today. Mother Nature sent the snow storm and the University of Pittsburgh the avalanche, the undefeated Golden Panthers, logical claimants of the national collegiate basketball championship.

The Panthers are starting the final on the row of the already long season, meeting West Virginia's Mountaineers here tonight in a Big Four contest. Tuesday they will be in Washington for a return game with Wash-Jeff and a week from today, they'll pay Penn State the annual visit.

Tonight's contest looms as being a very, very tough one. I cannot see where Pitt should rate any great advantage over the Mountaineers, and the odds that are being quoted on the game, 2 to 1 and 10 to 6 on Pitt look to be entirely out of place.

In the first place, West Virginia is due to be "on." The Stadsvold crew has been "off" since they played Pitt last, having been defeated by Wash-Jeff and Davis Elkins (losing to the latter team twice) and playing just fair basketball in defeating Grove City and Carnegie Tech. The Mountaineers have played 16 games to date.

Pitt will be engaging in its nine-

SPORTS writers schooled in the conventions and traditions of their trade today are busy dusting off those ancient and moth-eaten expressions "CRUCIAL TEST" and "SEASONAL CLASSIC," for no verbal volleys other than these are going to prove adequate and satisfactory when the moulders of public opinion take up the serious business of doing a typewriter sketch of the Pittsburgh-Detroit hockey game to be played at Duquesne Garden at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

Of all the crucial games played here this season, there is no doubt but that tonight's ice conflict deserves to be ranked as the most crucial. The rival factions, the Pirates and the Cougars, now are deadlocked in the American Division race, and because the season is to close this month, it is evident that the team emerging victorious will greatly enhance its chances of being in third place at the finish.

BENEFIT GAMES TONIGHT

Everything is in readiness for the feature floor game slated in the benefit basketball carnival to be staged this evening at Duquesne University by the Clergymen's Fund for Miners' Relief Association when the Cleveland Rosenblums and Duquesne Lafayettes clash in the headliner engagement. Duquesne Lafayettes, champions of the Allegheny County League here for two years, realizing the class of the Rosenblums, have practiced diligently during the past week and Coach Minnick will present a well-trained quint against the Clevelanders.

With three of the old Cleveland pro stars as a nucleus in Rich Deighman, the giant 6-foot 4-inch center, and the incomparable forwards, Nat Hickey and Carl Husta, two of the greatest stars in the game, Manager Dave Kerr will have the Rosenblums primed to the moment to avenge a recent defeat suffered at McKeesport.

There will be musical features as well as high class preliminaries, to be followed by the appearance of the highly touted and famous Cleveland Rosies matched against Pittsburgh's own professional champions—Duquesne Lafayettes. The program will begin at 7 o'clock sharp.

Duquesne Light meets Kaufmann's and Osceola meets Veronas in the two preliminary games.

IN THE TRAINING CAMPS

TAMPA, Fla., March 3.—(AP.)—Irvine Hadley, pitcher for the Washington Senators, was recovering today from an operation for appendicitis performed early this morning. His condition was reported as good by hospital authorities early today.

Hadley was taken seriously ill late last night. Clark Griffith, club president, said he would probably be out of the game for five or six weeks.

Hadley's home is in Lynn, Mass. He joined the Senators in 1927, coming from the Birmingham club of the Southern Association.

ROBINS MAY MEET TERMS

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 3.—(INS.)—Officials of the Brooklyn club are reported to have consented to pay Dazzy Vance, strikeout king, a salary of nearly $20,000 a year.

Manager Robinson gave all of his pitchers a long workout yesterday and was particularly impressed by the showing of Louis Koupal, former Pirate obtained from Indianapolis.

Roland Locke, famous Nebraska sprinter, has informed Robinson that he will not compete for a job in the Brooklyn outfield because he fears to impair his amateur standing.

PHILS PLAY GAME TODAY

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 3.—(AP.)—Speeding up practice, Manager Burt Shotton ordered the Phillies out for their first real ball game today. All hands have not yet reported, but there are sufficient here for two nines and most of the candidates were slated to work.

SISLER COMPETES

TAMPA, Fla., March 3.—(AP.)—George Sisler, former Brown star, and Joe Judge, veteran Washington first sacker, are to fight it out for the regular job of guarding the 1928 initial sack of the Senators.

Sisler reported in camp yesterday and took part in the training session. Judge finally reached an agreement with Clark Griffith over his salary but not until he had heard the Washington team owner say that he was not to be traded and that Sisler was not as yet regarded as the regular first baseman.

JOE SEWELL IN SHAPE

NEW ORLEANS, Mar. 3.—(AP.)—News that shortstop Joe Sewell, Cleveland's last holdout, would report "in great shape and ready to go" made Manager Roger Peckinpaugh and his Cleveland Indians jubilant today. The shortstop, who signed a two-year contract yesterday after two months of dickering, has kept himself fit and will not be handicapped by bad legs which bothered him at the start of the last campaign, according to his brother, Luke Sewell.

HOCKEY

much to be coveted. The team finishing in the third notch will be eligible to compete in the titular playoff series at the close of the regular campaign, and much coin of the realm, as well as glory, will go to the competing clubs. The team finishing in fourth place is not eligible to compete in the play-offs, and its only reward will be some spirited razzing.

No one realizes the width of the gap separating third and fourth place better than do the players and for this reason the battling is certain to be torrid in the extreme. A slump of about a month's duration, during which time the Pirates overtook them, has been shaken off by the Cougars, and in recent battles they have been outskating the best clubs in the circuit. The locals, too, are at the peak of their form. Their display of power on Thursday night, when they humbled Toronto by 4-2, convinced local fans that Detroit will not want for opposition.

MILKS IN FORM AGAIN

Pirate victory hopes are based largely upon the return to form of Hib Milks, who scored three goals against Toronto. The main cog in the Bucs' attack until shortly after mid-season, Hib suddenly lost his potency and failed to register a tally for some 10 games. A series of minor injuries contributed to Milks' slump, but his great work against the Leafs gave indication that tonight's fight is not likely to be one of those scoreless things. The passing and team play of the locals, too, has reached new heights of efficiency, and the Worters, Burke and McCaffrey trio ranks with the best defense combinations in the game.

All of which might prompt the belief that Detroit is to be outclassed, but such is not likely to be the case. The Cougars defeated the Pirates soundly in two previous appearances here, and they are certain to command plenty of respect. Detroit has a big edge on most clubs in that their reserve front line is just about as powerful as the starters, enabling them to keep up the pressure from the first minute to the last. Their team play ever has been of the best, and as for fighting spirit—neither club lacks it.

Yes, it is the "crucial test" for both clubs and it should be the "season's classic". The probable lineup:

Detroit.	pos.	Pittsburgh.
Holmes	G	Worters
Noble	D	Burke
Traub	D	McCaffrey
Aurie	W	Darragh
Hay	W	Cotton
Foyston	C	Milks

Spares—Detroit: Sheppard, Fraser, Walker, Cooper, Loughlin and Palangio; Pittsburgh: Drury, White, McCurry, Smith and McKinnon.

Jack Only Real Card

By ROBERT A. HEREFORD,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Tex Rickard's so-called elimination bout at Madison Square Garden between Jack Delaney, the "Rapier of the North," and Tom Heeney, the sturdy New Zealand blacksmith did a more thorough job than had been expected.

It eliminated both Delaney and Heeney as colorful opponents in a match with Champion Gene Tunney. As Johnny Risko, the drab Cleveland performer really never was in the running and Jack Sharkey had eliminated himself by his draw against Heeney, the contest actually eliminated everybody but Jack Dempsey, who has shrewdly fought shy of the elimination tournaments.

A spectacular knockout finding Jack Delaney standing above the prostrate form of stalwart Tom Heeney would have immediately booked him as Tunney's first summer opponent. A reversal of this situation would have established Heeney as Tunney's sure opponent and Rickard could have ballyhooed the match as a colorful international affair.

It is common knowledge that Rickard put in a long distance call for Dempsey after the fight. He got in touch with the former champion. "Am leaving here on March 14: Arrive in New York March 19. Hold everything," were Dempsey's reported words.

Gus Wilson, Dempsey's trainer, has also received word from the former champion. Dempsey will work out at Wilson's training quarters at Orangeburg, New York, as soon as he arrives.

HEAVY DOUGH FOR HEAVIES

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP.)—Tom Heeney, victor, and Jack Delaney, loser, received $41,244 apiece for boxing 15 rounds in the first part of the heavyweight elimination semi-finals. The net receipts of the bout amounted to $164,976. Each boxer fought for 25 per cent of the gate.

In collecting Heeney's share yesterday, Charles J. Harvey, his manager, announced he would demand a match with Gene Tunney for the New Zealander.

Joe Jacobs, manager of Delaney, collected the Bridgeporter's payoff check, declaring "bright eyes" would continue as a heavyweight, contradicting reports that he would return to the light-heavyweight division.

the title series in the Pitt Stadium next week.

The Castleites defeated Butler to take the Section 3 title last evening, playing before a capacity crowd in the Pitt Stadium. The score was 36-21. New Castle fought a game, uphill battle to win, and was trailing by a point at half time. The teams previously had split even in the regular sectional two-game series, each having defeated the other on their home floors.

Ostrosky and Reider, clever New Castle athletes, were the stars of the game, the former caging three baskets and the latter getting four. In the second half the New Castle offensive began to function properly, and swept aside the Butler defense with ease.

Ostrosky's superb work from the foul line was particularly remarkable. He scored six out of six tries.

This afternoon in the Stadium, Fifth Avenue and Allegheny will resume their series for the city title. The teams will clash in the second game of the series, which will end today if Allegheny is able to again down the Downtowners.

Allegheny won the opening game by a 29-21 score.

teenth battle of the season here this evening. Unbeaten, the strain on the youthful Pitt players has been terrific, and is becoming more so as the days roll by. Coach Carlson has been using practically the same five men in all of his games, and a crack-up is the logical thing to expect. They faltered against Notre Dame and nearly lost, only their fighting spirit and the fact that the Irish played some dumb basketball saving the day.

Against Grove City the other night out in the Stadium in Pittsburgh, the Panthers played brilliantly, looking as good as they have all season, with the possible exception of the game with Syracuse, or the Dartmouth contest. It is Doctor Carlson's earnest hope to have the boys in the same condition tonight.

W. VA. TO MISS BLACK

One factor that will handicap West Virginia is the absence from the lineup of Jim Black, veteran guard, who was injured in the Allegheny game at Meadville last Saturday. Black's play this year has been of great worth to the local varsity. If he is unable to see service tonight, and I understand the chances of his being used are slight, West Virginia will be materially weakened.

Dr. Carlson expects to start his regular lineup, though at the last minute, Wrobleski may be shifted to a forward and Paul Fisher used at a guard, with Poison Paul Zehfuss riding the bench for a while. Fisher looked good against Grove City, and it may develop that Carlson will take advantage of the opportunity to give little Zehfuss a much needed rest. And Les Cohen may be at center in the place of the dependable Gyp Wunderlich. Cohen's play in the last few games has been of high order. He is a good player.

Calvin Boister, of Pittsburgh, will referee the game. The S. R. O. sign has been out for two weeks past, and even standing room for tonight's game may be limited to folks with only one leg. Rafter seats have been quoted at scalper prices.

It will be a great old tussle.

BOROTRA IS BEATEN BY AUSSIE NET STAR

that last year that item averaged no less than $50 per game.

All of which means that, with practice balls included, about 38 spheres are required on an average for the playing of each game.

With 77 games being played at home, the total number of balls used during a year at that rate is 2,926, representing an aggregate cost of $3,803.80.

DAVE BANCROFT, Brooklyn's 36-year-old shortstop, hopes to surprise the dopesters who are predicting that he will fall far below his old form this year.

Dave Bancroft.

"I note that some of the boys aren't so sure that I will help the Dodgers," Bancroft is quoted. "Well, they may have the right dope. But I never felt better and my legs are in fine shape. The Brooklyn club has done very well by me and you may be certain that, as usual, I will give everything I have.

"Don't be surprised if this Brooklyn club raises hob with the old league. If Riconda plays as well as I think he will at third base, and this boy Bissonette is all I hear he is, look out.

"Any team which goes into a race with the pitching which Brooklyn boasts is a dangerous proposition from the start. I am not talking about the winning of the pennants, but we should be poison for a lot of the boys with higher ratings. We will win back a lot of those one-run decisions the Dodgers lost last year.

"Hornsby should be of tremendous value to the Boston club. He is the sort of player the Braves have needed. The sort I fairly prayed for while I was manager. But it wasn't my luck to get him.

"But don't overlook the Dodgers, and Old Man Bancroft at short."

WITH 18 consecutive victories chalked up, the unbeaten Pitt basketball team has only three more hurdles to clear for a perfect season. All three games will be played away from home, the Panthers meeting West Virginia in Morgantown tonight, W. & J. in Washington, Pa. next Tuesday night, and Penn State in State College next Saturday night.

In their first game with the Mountaineers, whom they meet again tonight, the Panthers won easily, 51 to 28.

JACK KEARNS, former manager of Jack Dempsey, and now handling the affairs of Mickie Walker, middleweight champion, is still a master at fistic ballyhoo.

Jack Kearns.

Out on the Pacific coast, as soon as he learned that Dempsey had become manager of Armand Emanuel, Kearns becomes active in trying to arrange a match between Walker and Emanuel. He said he had received a good offer from San Francisco promoters, but figured the bout would draw better in Los Angeles, hinting at a gate of $100,000.

THEN Jack started the showman stuff. First he said he would not sign unless the articles stipulated that Dempsey himself should be Emanuel's chief second and appear in that fighter's corner, and now he comes to the front with more ballyhoo by offering to let Dempsey come in and finish the fight for Emanuel against Walker if Emanuel "gets tired or is knocked out." "That's what I think of Dempsey's fighting ability," Kearns says.

Of course it's only a publicity play and no such change of principals during a bout would be permitted by the boxing authorities on the coast, but Kearns aimed for nothing more than to get the show talked about and to take another verbal slam at Dempsey.

TURF followers probably are not amiss in the surmise that Earl Sande, suspended king of the saddle, is doing a lot of wondering these days as to whether he will be reinstated in time for the Kentucky Derby.

Earl Sande.

Sande is particularly eager to ride in the Kentucky Derby again because he has won the big event twice, and one victory more would enable him to equal the all-time record of three victories, set by Isaac Murphy, the old-time Negro jockey. Murphy won on Buchanan, Riley and Kingman in 1884, 1890 and 1891, respectively.

Soccer Rivals Clash

GAMES TODAY.
NATIONAL AMATEUR CUP.
Clan McPherson vs. Swissvale.
EXHIBITION GAME.
Celtics vs. Internationals at Lawrence Park.

By TOM BIRKS.

TODAY'S soccer activities will find the fans of the district wending their way to Swissvale where the Clan McPherson eleven of the North hooks up with the Switch outfit at the Church street grounds.

There should be plenty of rivalry in this game, for the winner is sure to get a crack at Heidelberg in the next round should the national amateur champions win at Cleveland Sunday.

Followers of the North Siders, however, are worrying regarding the condition of the Clan outfit. McPherson has not played a game for a long time and there is more than a chance that the eleven might be "off" following that long layoff.

On the other hand, Stark and his comrades had a real fight eliminating Harmarville in the last round and may be in tip-top shape for the 90 minutes of cup tie soccer.

The only other game in the district will find Pittsburgh Celtics meeting the Internationals in an exhibition game at Lawrence Park. This should be a good game and will attract many fans.

yesterday and worked out in the gymnasium of the Swissvale A. C., in the afternoon with Garfield Johnson and his two brothers, Kid Brown and Mule Brown, both of whom now reside here. Mule scored a two-round knockout at Motor Square last Monday night when he entered the ring in a substitute role against Danny Stewart. Bobby is stopping at Frank Sutton's Hotel. He will box again today and tomorrow at the Swissvale A. C. He is confident he will add Rosenbloom to his imposing list of victims and was glad of the opportunity to work with Johnson, who recently boxed Rosenbloom here.

Pete Zivic and Joey Katkish box at the Olympic A. C., in New York tonight. The former opposes Lou Moscowitz in the 10-round main bout and the latter engages Al Singer in a six-rounder.

An eight-round semi-final and two six-round preliminaries will round out the Joey LaGray-California Joe Gans card at McKeesport next Thursday night. La Grey boxes Nick Palmer over the 12-round route in Brooklyn tonight.

The New York amateur boxing champions will oppose the Pittsburgh champions in an inter-city show at Motor Square Garden next Saturday night. Seven inter-city bouts and three special bouts between local boxers comprise the program.

U. S. Carpentier and Louie DeArco of Cleveland will meet in the main bout at New Castle Monday night.

Once Not Enough, Muller Marries Second Time

RENO, Nev., March 3.—With the same smashing unexpectedness that characterized his play as an all-America end, Harold P. (Brick) Muller made a matrimonial touchdown in Reno, with Mrs. Zanita Campbell of Berkley, running successful interference.

It is the second matrimonial venture for the sorrel-topped California athlete. He married Miss Bernice Berwin, stock theatrical star, in another "surprise wedding" a few days before Christmas in 1925.

U. P.'s in; Dukes Win

CHICK DAVIES' Dukes, who have been making a valiant battle for the top position in the Tri-state Conference, closed their home season last night by sinking Col. Bo McMillin's Covenanter basketball craft of Geneva College by 30-18 and clinched second place. Had Thiel been able to defeat Westminster, the Dukes would have still been in the running for the title, provided, of course, that Geneva defeated the U. P.'s next week.

But Thiel, though it made a valiant fight, was unable to check the United Presbyterians and dropped a 38-21 decision. The victory clinches the 1928 championship for Westminster.

Duquesne played some good and some bad basketball in defeating Geneva last evening. Col. Bo brought a mighty clean playing team here, and gave the locals a good game, better in the second half than in the first.

Mainly through the goal getting of Eddie Losman and Ganzy Benedict, who each bagged a trio of baskets, the Dukes led at half time by a 16-8 score. Geneva was held to a single field, scored at the start of the game by Emerick.

In the second half, Bo got his defense working a bit better, for a time at least, and pulled up to within three points of the Dukes at one stage of festivities, but Joe Vernon and Ganzy and Eddie and Bruce Stephens kept plugging and eventually gave Duquesne its 12-point margain.

Len Friedman, Rubenstein and Bruce, who substituted for Ransom at center, played very well for Geneva.

The lineup:

Duquesne—30.		Geneva—18.
Benedict	F	(C) Rubenstein
Stephens	F	Friedman
Vernon	C	Ransom
Rosenberg (A. C.)	G	Emerick
Losman	G	Merriman

PIRATES

with the fastest stuff that has yet been achieved.

"That kid has something," exclaimed Joe Devine, who watched Regis closely.

"He sure has the ability. It's in him if he wants to bring it out," said the plain-speaking Joe Harris.

After Leheny had completed his trick, Bush called him aside and complimented him for his showing. It seems that the youngster had not learned to follow through after getting rid of the ball. He was given some lessons on this important phase of pitching and as he worked against the Yans he put the instruction into convincing action.

Leheny's size is a big thing in his favor. Although he is two years below his majority, the former star of the J. J. Coynes has a natural smoothness. It isn't likely he can make the big league this year, but if he continues to show the stuff he displayed yesterday, the youngster will not wander far without a distinctive Pirate tag. Star left-handers are too scarce to take any chances.

The regular infield is getting close to top condition, although most of the time is given to hitting. Capt. Traynor, Wright, Adams and Grantham set themselves at their various posts while the Hooligans bat and in this way they are able to get the kind of action that makes for good form.

The whole squad is ready for competition, but Bush says he will not stage a camp game before Tuesday. So anxious is Donie to get in long batting drills he took a chance on intermittent showers in the morning work-out of yesterday.

HELEN WILLS TO PLAY AT MONTE CARLO, SAID

PARIS, March 3.—(AP.)—A Monte Carlo dispatch to the continental edition of the London Daily Mail says that Helen Wills, California tennis star, intends to play at the Monte Carlo tournament in April according to a cable message received by a friend at Monte Carlo. Henri Cochet and other prominent players also are expected to compete.

MELLON MEETS OHIOANS

The Mellon National Bank team will be out for revenge tonight when it clashes with the famous Union Trust quintet of Cleveland on the Pitt Stadium floor. The Clevelanders defeated Mellon Bank in Cleveland last Saturday.

GIRL ATHLETES MEET

Girl athletes, representing four Western Pennsylvania schools, namely Pitt, Pennsylvania College for Women, Slippery Rock State Normal School and Carnegie Tech, will stage an indoor meet on the Pitt floor today.

NICOLA SIGNS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 3.—(INS.)—Fritz Nicola, shortstop on the Columbus team of the American Association last year, and reported a holdout last week, signed his contract for 1928 with Columbus.

FLIES OWN PLANE TO FIGHT

ATLANTA, Mar. 3.—W. L. (Young) Stribling, pugilist-aviator, will hop off today for Cleveland, where he is to box Chuck Wiggins Monday night. Stribling will fly his own Fokker plane, which he purchased recently and in which he plans to tour the country.

How to Get New Industries; Atlanta's Unique Record.

By B. C. FORBES

ATLANTA, Ga., March 3.

IF YOUR city wants to attract industries, ask Atlanta how it is done. Write Ivan Allen, chairman of the Forward Atlanta Commission, father of the "Forward Atlanta" idea, or Milton Dargan, Jr., president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Admittedly, Atlanta has won leadership in national industrial advertising and in the effectiveness of its follow-up methods. These methods cannot be here described because they are too comprehensive, too many-sided to summarize usefully.

IN ITS two forward Atlanta years $14,919,000 in new payrolls have been attracted, which is nearly three times the record of the best two previous years; 9,158 new jobs have been furnished by the 309 new concerns drawn to the city.

The trebling of Atlanta's growth is the direct fruit of adequate nationwide advertising properly followed through, representing the power of organized community promotion, based on facts, soundly planned, ably executed. At the end of 1926, the first year of aggressive reaching out, some skeptics contended that 1926 was a banner year for the whole country and that that was why so many new concerns came to Atlanta. But 1927 certainly was not a banner year, yet more new concerns located in Atlanta than during 1926.

AMONG nationally-known organizations, having unusually capable and far-sighted management, the following have invested millions in branch plants here within the last two years:

General Motors is erecting a very large plant for assembling Chevrolets and for manufacturing in their entirety all of the Fisher bodies therefor. Normal capacity will be 350 cars a day, but the management assures me that they can step up to 500 a day if necessary. A parts and service warehouse will take care of five states. From 1,200 to 1,400 men will be employed, calling for a daily payroll of $8,000 or more. Production is scheduled to begin within a month.

PULLMAN COMPANY has erected a $2,000,000 plant to maintain its equipment in the South.

Sears-Roebuck have built a $3,000,000 plant.

R. H. Macy & Co. affiliated themselves with one of Atlanta's oldest department stores and has opened a thoroughly modern $3,000,000 new store.

The first southern plant of Cluett, Peabody & Co. has been completed here, and shirts formerly made in Troy, N. Y., and shipped to the South are now produced on the ground from native raw materials and by southern labor.

THE value of manufactured products in Atlanta was $16,000,000 in 1900; by 1925 the total was almost $132,000,000, and this year's figure will be much larger. The entire state of Georgia manufactured less in 1900 than Atlanta alone now manufactures—with perhaps $35,000,000 to spare.

ONE example of how Atlanta's promotion works:

J. E. Churchwell, in charge of the southern territory for Johnson & Johnson, tells how he reached the conclusion that his company should have a factory branch in Atlanta, with a warehouse to supply southern trade promptly. He felt that a mill in this section would be more profitable than elsewhere. Collecting abundant data, he went to New Brunswick to submit his recommendations to the heads of the company.

When he pulled out a set of "Forward Atlanta" advertisements and asked the assembled executives to read them, he got the reply, "We don't need to. We have noted each one as it appeared."

Thereafter the great $5,000,000 Chicopee mill at Gainesville was built, and Johnson & Johnson established in Atlanta a completely equipped regional headquarters organization.

THE domestic commerce division of Secretary Hoover's department, after devoting months to conducting an A to Z survey, has published a book on the Southeast which contains this statement:

"Atlanta is generally recognized as the principal headquarters city of this region, being the seat of a large part of the regional administrative machinery of concerns marketing their services and commodities in the territory. . . . The principal reason given by these concerns for the choice of headquarters was Atlanta's position as a radiating point for all the railroads traversing this region. . . This, it is said, makes management and supervision easy and enables ready contacts with customer and sales force."

WHEN Florida was booming I discovered during a visit to Atlanta that many citizens were alarmed lest Atlanta be drained of people and badly overshadowed. I then told a gathering of business men that the more prosperous and populous Florida became the better it would be for Atlanta, as well as other industrial cities within easy shipping distance of the Everglade State. That was what happened and will continue to happen. Prosperity in one section invariably helps adjacent sections.

BUYING LIFTS STEEL AND MOTORS

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP.)—Heavy buying of General Motors common, which advanced more than 3 points to 142, a new high record for the present movement, and a revival of activity and strength in United States Steel common, which advanced 2 points to 140¼, featured today's brief but active stock market. Price movements in the general list were decidedly irregular.

There was little in the day's news to influence the price movement. Week-end business reviews continued to report irregularity in the general situation, with the volume in most lines below that of the corresponding period last year. The reduction in call money rates yesterday from 4½ to 4¼ per cent, was accepted as indications of no immediate strain in the credit situation.

The demand for General Motors was inspired by the predictions of record-breaking first quarter motor car earnings and reports of profitable operations by several of the numerous subsidiaries. Wall street also is counting on a substantial extra cash dividend at the May meeting. Steel common, which was rather sluggish yesterday and during the early part of today's session, suddenly sprang into activity in the last hour of trading.

Fresh weakness cropped out in the Seaboard Air Line issues, the common sinking to a new low. Youngstown Sheet and Tube dipped more than 2 points to a new low for the year and heaviness developed in International Nickel, Union Carbide, Timken Roller Bearing, Radio, Case Threshing and several other specialties. On the other hand, sharp gains were recorded by Du Pont, National Tea, American Machine and Foundry and Consolidated Gas.

The closing was irregular. Total sales approximated 1,400,000 shares.

NEWS AND VIEWS

General Motors Spurts.

General Motors executed one of its phenomenal movements this morning when it jumped to a level five points above yesterday's low with the volume of trading in the first hour running close to 150,000 shares. Traders usually correct in their calculations as to the movement of the stock began their heavy buying Wednesday and continued through Thursday and yesterday. This demand depleted the floating supply materially and the effect of the buying became pronounced this morning. First sale today was a block of 20,000 shares on a split opening at 139⅞-140, followed by another block of 10,000 shares at 140 flat. The stock closed at 139⅞ Friday. The advance subsequently carried the price to 142, where there was a halt, as the stock consolidated its gain and took up the slack offerings brought out by the spurt. Later the stock resumed the advance with the volume continuing on the enormous scale of the first hour. The buying is based on expectations of excellent earnings for the current quarter and the practical certainty that the company will declare an extra dividend at the next meeting. Publication of Chevrolet production figures for February, showing a gain of about 40 per cent over February, 1927, was an additional stimulus. Conservative observers estimated some time ago that the current quarter would show about $3.25 a share earned on the 17 odd million shares of common and there is a disposition now to lift this estimate.

Chevrolet February Output.

Chevrolet Motor Company established a new production record for February with total output of 119,500 cars and trucks. This compares with 91,000 cars and trucks in January this year and 85,831 units in February, 1927, previous record for that month.

Automotive Products Exports.

Exports of automotive products during January totaled $32,576,127, an increase of 6.7 per cent over January, 1927, and of 20.5 per cent over January, 1926, Commerce Department reports. Shipments of passenger car and truck units increased 35.5 per cent over December, 1927, and showed a gain of 7.5 per cent over January, last year.

May Drug Expansion Plans.

The new May Drug Stores Corporation business for 1928 is about 10 per cent ahead of 1927 figures at this time. A new store was opened in Braddock two weeks ago, and is the forerunner of a proposed plan of expansion along these lines. May Drug now has 14 stores in the Pittsburgh district.

J. C. Penney Sales Increase.

J. C. Penney & Co. February sales amounted to $8,906,467 against $7,490,834 in February, 1927. Two months' sales totaled $16,635,354 against $15,821,494 last year.

Beet Crop Abroad Unchanged.

Dr. Mikusch, sugar expert, estimates European beet sugar production at 8,034,000 metric tons. The same as his estimate a month ago. World sugar production is placed at 26,201,000 tons, off 20,000 tons from his previous estimate and compares with 27,745,000 metric tons last year. Licht estimates European beet sugar production at 8,048,000 tons, unchanged from his last estimate.

Deducting estimated Federal taxes of $765,000, balance is equal to $7.64 a share earned on 804,437 shares of common and preferred stock. This compares with $8,723,731 after deducting actual Federal taxes of $848,409 to $7.33 a share on 802,955 shares in 1926. The two stocks share alike after dividends of 25 cents a share have been paid on both issues.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, March 3.—The cotton market opened steady today at a decline of 12 to 15 points under selling promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and the forecast for rain in the southwest.

Initial offerings were fairly well taken and further price-fixing was reported in May, but demand was limited and slight bulges from the opening decline were followed by renewed weakness, May selling off to 18.40c and October to 17.88c before the end of the first hour, or 15 to 17 points net lower.

Private cables reported hedging and liquidation in the Liverpool market with trade calling about the only support, but that demand for cotton cloths in Manchester was well sustained, and there was freer buying of yarns from both American and Egyptian cotton.

HARBISON HITS NEW RECORD

Further strength in the American Window Glass Machine Company stocks was noted on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the short week-end session today.

The common was first in the market with a transaction at 22¾, up 1¾ points from Friday's last price, which, in turn, was an advance of 4 points over the sale price of a few days previous. The preferred was rather scarce this morning, but the offering price disclosed a wide upward spread from the figure at which the shares changed hands in the late market yesterday.

The Street was still guessing as to the reason for the sudden spurt in the Machine issues and there was some disposition to attribute it to the probability of the company benefiting from manufacture of the new non-shatter glass for automobiles. The general improvement in the glass industry and the well sustained operations of the building industry are perhaps the principal factors bearing on the advance.

Harbison-Walker common took another wide jump, to 92½, a new high record, and a gain of 7½ points over the price at which the shares changed here on the last previous sale early in the week. Fireproofing preferred held the gain established yesterday and was firm around 22.

American Window Glass Company preferred responded to the situation reflected in the American Window Glass Machine shares, selling today at 90 as compared with the previous price of 85. Investment bargain hunters have recognized the value of Window Glass Company preferred during its recent slide, but there has been very little of the stock available.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, March 3.—Wheat and rye today both touched a new high price record for the season. Attention of wheat traders was directed largely to bullish aspects of the wheat crop outlook in the central west and in the southwest as well. Opening unchanged to ⅜c higher, wheat later showed an all-around advance. Corn and oats were relatively steady, corn starting unchanged to ⅛@¼c up and then undergoing a slight dip. Provisions inclined downward.

Supplementing bullish effect of unfavorable crop reports concerning United States winter wheat, advices were also at hand today that supplies of native wheat in Germany are small and that the German stock of rye is very small. In this connection a leading British authority was quoted today as predicting that German importers would buy freely of American grains, rye in particular.

Some Chicago trade experts today attached special significance to the fact that of the 100,000 bushels of wheat shipped out of here yesterday the bulk went to millers. In this connection gossip was current that mills were being forced to draw on Chicago stocks because of inability to obtain supplies elsewhere.

BUGS BAER Says

THE motto of this column being adapted from the cafeteria slogan, courtesy without service, it is with magnetic pleasure that we tip off the League of Nations' last wise crack.

The League put the map of the world on the bum. Now it is after the calendar.

It plans a revision of chronological schedules. Instead of twelve months in a year it wants thirteen.

Arthur "Bugs" Baer

Which is perfect for the landlords and doesn't help the man who gets paid by the week.

The idea is 13 months of 28 days each. Which brings the bills closer to the purchases without reducing the prices.

Another peevish item is the name of the new month.

We would sure hate to have two Februaries like the one just past, and one August is enough in any summer.

If they made the thirteenth month a winter institution it would mean four weeks more of coal and furs. If they tacked the extra month to the summer string it would break us buying ice and mosquito netting.

The calendar has been sailing along for quite some few centuries. The only objection we have had to its arrangement is the lack of pay days. If they could take out some Wednesdays and put in more Saturdays we would take a junior membership in the League.

As the idea now stands, the League intends to squeeze in the baby month between June and July. They probably want to arrange a national sunstroke week.

The name of the pet month is to be Sol. They might have called it Oscar or Jake.

Why don't they call it Sal?

Isn't Sol a silly name for a month? Imagine being born on the seventeenth of Sol.

What would a bank president say if you gave him a promissory note due on the twenty-seventh of Jim?

Right over the desk is a calendar furnished by the Scandinavian-American Line. It portrays the profile of a handsome two-funnel steamer.

It reminds us that we promised to take the wife to Europe, next April.

And we will do that thing. But we will make the date of sailing on the third of Sol.

Finish of King Fiasco Not License for Vice

The end of the clean-up fiasco of which William L. King was the transitory hero and Pittsburgh vice, the villain, has come with the dropping of the cases of a number of men arrested at the instance of King. There was nothing else to do. King long ago admitted he had ''framed'' the charges, then departed as ingloriously as the descent of the charred stick of a spent rocket.

Members of the Citizens' League of Pittsburgh will be glad to forget Mr. King, and Pittsburgh will be glad to forget everything about him except the necessity of putting him where he belongs. That duty it willingly leaves to the proper authorities. We have learned a lesson that was worth what it cost in experience and money.

Yet the failure of the ''crusade'' against vice will not discourage decent people nor cause them to be less determined that Pittsburgh shall be as clean and wholesome a place in which to live as it is possible for a large city, with many and varying elements, to be. The majority wants that kind of a city, and what the majority wants it can get.

This is said by way of warning to the sinister factors of big city life, which, doubtless, are greatly heartened by the failure of King methods to fasten proof of guilt upon those whose arrest he had caused. Nobody wants to see a person unjustly convicted of crime, and for that reason the public must commend the nolle prossing of the men King falsely accused.

However, the action of the court is not to be construed as a license for vice and gambling. That it will be so construed in certain quarters is certain, and for that reason we shall expect our police authorities to be more alert than ever. If they are not, they will have to answer to a decent citizenry.

Presidential Primary Law Would Stop 'Draft' Talk

All this talk about ''drafting'' President Coolidge is a fine example of the need of a national primary law in order that the people could nominate their own candidates for President.

President Coolidge has twice declared that he will not run again. He very evidently is determined to retire. And Thomas Edison well said that the professed friends of Mr. Coolidge who declined to take the President's decision for its full value do very little credit to his reputation for veracity and integrity.

If Mr. Edison was a politician, which he is not, he would know that most of this draft talk comes from professional politicians who are seeking to capitalize the President's popularity solely in the interest of their own conspiracy to name the next Republican candidate for President.

By encouraging the belief that President Coolidge will run again, which he has said he would not do, they hope to dissuade Republican delegates from pledging themselves to any of the other candidates. They thus would have large blocs of unpledged delegates at Kansas City. The political manipulator who has a definite object in view is never so strong as in a convention which contains a large number of trusting, amateurish, unpledged delegates. While the unpledged ones are milling around, like a herd without a cow-bell, the political Mr. Fixits, who are now crying ''draft Coolidge,'' will then be meeting behind closed doors, making their personal political deals and agreeing upon some candidate who will deliver the political pap and patronage to them after he is elected.

There is one practical way of stopping these secret deals and trades, always made behind the scenes. The way is to adopt a uniform presidential preference law. There would be no unpledged delegates then. The people would nominate their own candidates. This important task would not be left to possible tricksters and corruptionists.

Let Council Be Certain Bridge Concrete Is Good

Council is to be commended for the determined effort it is making to get the truth about the quality of the concrete used in the construction of the Mt. Washington roadway bridge and retaining walls. Conflicting reports about the matter led to an inquiry which Council has just taken up.

The Mt. Washington roadway appears to be the hoodoo improvement of those voted in the bond issue a number of years ago. Court litigation delayed the beginning of the work and even halted construction after it was begun, resulting in a delay of another year and awarding of the contract to another firm after considerable work had been done by the original successful bidder. Now that the roadway lacks but little of being completed the jinx that has pursued it again appears in something more than suspicion of defective construction.

Perhaps it will be proven that the faults complained of are only surface defects, easily remedied, as stated by one of the city's engineers, although it would seem that the very nature of concrete work warrants the assumption that such defects as are visible on the surface are likely to occur in the interior of the mass.

Pittsburgh has an expensive example of poor retaining wall construction in those along Bigelow boulevard and wants no more of it. Council will do well to go into the Mt. Washington work thoroughly and not desist until convinced there is no cause for alarm.

How Long Will Decent Folk Tolerate Prize Fighting?

On Tuesday night in Los Angeles for ten rounds of three minutes each, two men tried to batter each other into unconsciousness, cheered on by the shouts of 40,000 people, who had paid $125,000 to view the spectacle.

It was just a regular exhibition of prize fighting, a feature of twentieth century civilization in America.

Godfrey, a 236-pound Negro, was pitted against Uzcudun, a 192-pound white man, a Basque from the Spanish Pyrenees. White and colored spectators screamed for the victory of their men as they beat each other with their fists.

Thus a racial element was added to the degrading and brutalizing features of this ''sport.''

The peculiar problem of the United States is to get its races living together in peace and friendship, not to set them in howling, blood-thirsty antagonism to each other.

In this country, whose crime record is the scandal of the world, we have no need to gather mobs together and stir their lower passions by cruel and bloody spectacles which are attended and dominated by all the gambling and criminal elements of the population.

The Godfrey-Uzcudun fight was no credit to Los Angeles, to California or the nation.

How much longer are the decent, law-abiding people of the United States going to tolerate prize fighting?

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The Cry for Power

THE scheme that two French engineers, Georges Claude and Paul Boucherot have proposed at the Sorbonne in Paris stands in the category of the colossal. It contemplates the beginning of human control over the circulatory system of this huge globular organism that we call the earth.

The great arteries of the world's blood are the ocean currents. They control the conditions of habitability of its fairest lands, their influence extends even to the centers of continents. If the oceans were of small extent the world would be largely a desert. The Gulf Stream gives the British Isles and Western and Central Europe a more genial climate than that of the United States, though the latter lie much farther south. The Arctic Labrador current, on the other hand, cools New England and indirectly modifies the climate of the whole Great Lake region.

So, all over the habitable globe we find the conditions of temperature, rainfall, etc., more or less directly affected by the great "rivers in the ocean," so vividly described by Maury in his "Physical Geography of the Sea."

If human engineering could find a means of guiding and modifying these colossal currents we could almost make what we would of our world. By veering off the Gulf Stream, and dissipating its dependent "drifts," we could bring Europe to terms with a glacial blockade that would recall the ancient advance of the age of ice. On the other hand the Japanese, if they could manipulate the gigantic "Kuro Siwa," the "Black Stream," of the Pacific, and thus divert the customary currents along the American coast, would exercise a form of "sea-power" that Admiral Mahan never dreamed of.

But operations on such a scale are for some other world, or for a Jules Verne romance. Still, something might conceivably be done, think the Frenchmen to whom I have referred, toward cooling the tropics by artificial machinery which would bring to the surface, in the hotter regions, the deep, cold ocean water that probably never rises above 35 to 45 degrees temperature.

They think that a mean temperature of about 70 degrees—almost ideal for ordinary living conditions—might thus be caused to prevail on tropical islands and coasts where now the heat is too great for comfort, and especially too great for work. On the other hand, they calculate that by interaction between the hot tropical waters, impounded for the purpose, and the cold water brought directly from the depths, vapor currents could be produced that would suffice to drive systems of turbines, and thus supply an enormous amount of mechanical energy without the necessity of burning any fuel. As far as laboratory experiments give an indication they seem to have convinced some of their fellow engineers that the project is feasible, provided that enough faith and money, which is the fuel that keeps faith warm in such matters, can be had.

The scheme is tempting to the imagination like that other one, also of French origin, if I remember correctly, which proposes to take the heat that we need for domestic and mechanical purposes from the hot rocks of the earth under our feet.

For a being as ingenious and as ambitious as man it is truly aggravating to see so much natural power going to waste, especially since science has taught us how to make it serve us in a thousand ways, if only we can get hold of it even in the rawest state. Here is the earth, a six-sextillion-ton spin-wheel, grinding out unused energy in unmeasurable planetary quantities, and we sit helplessly by, or, rather, we sit on top of the huge machine, like stupid flies. Still closer to us, if theories be true, lie the stores of almost unthinkably great energy locked in the atoms of all matter. Out in the space depths it makes great suns glow. Here we have it right in our hands, and yet we cannot touch it!

Fundamentally, science tells us, we are ourselves made of energy, our very substance is a state or condition of energy, and yet we have to beg for energy to drive our autos and to keep us warm. That new music apparently coaxed out of empty space by waving fingers may point the way to the great discovery which shall at last emancipate man by attuning him to the universe.

Give Others a Chance

WHY be so anxious to entertain that you monopolize the conversation?

You may be a good talker, a fine story-teller, but this does not give you the right to monopolize the conversation most of the time.

Others may want to talk and others may have stories as good as yours.

Because your associates seem to listen politely and their attention seems to mean they are enjoying your monopoly is not a sure sign they are pleased.

They may be tolerant or courteous.

The incessant talker is seldom a deep thinker.

He doesn't give himself time to think—he does not keep quiet long enough to learn.

It is a great thing to be silent and learn from other members of your party, at times.

If you don't listen you can't realize the value of the things that others might tell of their travels or experience.

Usually the quiet person is full of information.

Try to bring out this fund of facts and learn rather than be classed a chatterer.

Tales That Are Told

"Two Birds With—"

IT WAS difficult to say which was the worst, the tenth-rate band of actors or the tenth-rate orchestra which was augmented by local talent.

The big scene was in progress and the villain had the hero in his power, bound and gagged at the cliff top. Below, the angry waves surged unceasingly to the accompaniment of the discordant violins.

With an expression too awful to describe, the villain threatened the hapless hero.

"At last I have you where I want you!" he snarled. "And over these lofty cliffs I'll hurl your vile body!"

Raising the hero in his arms, he was about to cast him into the cruel sea when an interruption came from the gallery.

"Don't waste 'im, guv'nor," cried a voice loudly. "'It one o' them fiddlers wiv' 'im!"—London Answers.

Sharing the Blame

THE chief had recently taken his son into partnership and was somewhat annoyed at the youngster's rather overbearing manner in the new position.

"Look here, young man," he said one day, "you must drop this attitude of yours. Let's have a little less of the 'I' and a little more of the 'we' in this business."

"H'm," agreed the boy. "I suppose I am only the junior partner," and he resolved to take his father's advice.

A few days later he burst in on his parent, looking just a trifle anxious.

"I say, dad!" he exclaimed. "We've done it now! We've married the typist—Miss Browne!"

Soul Stuff

WHO will not agree in principle with the statement of Representative La Guardia that the worst home is better than the best institution for children?

The best institution, as he points out, produces only mediocre men and women, fashioned along one unlovely pattern.

Look out for the children. They are soul stuff.

Dr. George W. Kirchway, former Warden at Sing Sing, tells the story of a man in the death house, known as "Happy Jack."

The Warden asked him for the story of his experience and he spent the last night of his life writing slowly and laboriously up to the time the guard touched his arm and said: "Well, Jack, we must be going."

Then Jack wrote down:

"The 'screw' has just been here and says I have five minutes. I cannot say much in five minutes. I ain't been much use in the world. If I could live, it would be to help you and others to help kids. Don't put kids in no institution. No kid ought to be in an institution. Yours forever, Happy Jack."

O. O. McINTYRE

In Gay Paree

PARIS, March 3.—Paris shimmered as a jewel against the plush of night. We arrived as a velvety dusk was blanketing the city, and in contrast to the soggy mist of Normandy the effect was like a heady wine on an empty stomach. One wants to sing or dance in the streets.

There is nothing new to write about Paris. It never changes, but it is always provocative, mysterious, wicked, and beautiful. There is the staccato honking of taxi horns as though a million geese were suddenly unloosed. The lively chatter like birds in an aviary. Scurry, flurry, dash and verve. Paree! Paree!

The wintry chill has driven sidewalk table patrons into the circular bars and the bright cafes, but the irrepressible spirit of Paris, living, loving and laughing the days away is unquenched. It is one spot I have found in a rather mussed up world that seems to be on perpetual holiday.

Strange ladies smile from bus platforms. Gendarmes, sensing your bewilderment, pilot you across the street, arm in arm. Bewhiskered gentlemen nod pleasantly as you pass along. On the surface, all Paris seems to ask of the stranger is to be happy.

Yet somehow you feel this mask of gaiety hides tragedy, and there is an ineffable sadness about it all. The franc has continued to fall. Thousands who were affluent are impoverished. Business is bad. And everywhere you see eyeless sockets, shattered limbs and twisted, expressionless faces—ineradicable scars of a people bled white.

It is then you forgive with a gush of understanding the petty gyppery and the slight insults which every American must endure who visits Paris. Either one must have this understanding, or Paris in a few weeks becomes a constant source of irritation.

Indeed, when one considers France there arises the unanswerable query. How can these people be happy? All these reflections came as we jolted our way in a red-wheeled horse-drawn fiacre from Gare St. Lazarre, driven by an apple-cheeked, chunky, wine-sodden old son of a couple of asterisks who gypped us out of four francs.

Paris, with its delicate tracery of multi-colored Neon lights, has not the blatant glare of a Broadway night. It spreads the gossamer sheen of a spider's web and encompasses the filagreed splendor of a fairy land. Well, practically. That.

The same servants greet you year after year. It does not seem anyone ever loses a job in Paris. The venerable hotel concierge in his funny monkey frock coat comes down off his tiny platform to kiss the carpet and call you by name. In America he is known as the head porter, but in France he ranks with the managing director. If you incur his displeasure, it is best to seek new quarters, yet he has all the obeisance of the lowliest of menials.

French cooking has never inspired my gustatory admiration. I have a feeling many insidious ptomaine what-nots rest under the savory sauces. It is pretty to look at, but so are many poisons. So after a drive through a strip of the Bois we wound up at a little inn on the Avenue de la Bordonnais in which Willis Morgan, a lean Texas darkey, is chef and proprietor. Willis cooks and does most of the serving and under the shadow of Eiffel Tower we had hot biscuits with rich maple syrup, f[illegible] pork chops with apple sauce, German fried potatoes, steaming fresh American coffee, apple pie generously seasoned with cinnamon and as a special treat tangy buckwheat cakes. American food needs more earnest press agenting. It is the best in the world. I would rather have one order of American ham and eggs—sunny side up—than the best meal Ciro ever offered the most discriminating gourmet.

On the way home a workman, plodding along in wooden shoes and harnessed to a cart in which sat his wife and three children, suddenly burst, full-throated, into song, and the song he warbled was the Marseillaise. There is patriotism for you.

The Joys of Accuracy

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A common fault and a common element of weakness is the habit of exaggeration. You have often heard a young flapper say that upon such and such an occasion she nearly died or that there were millions of people at the ball game, or some other manifest exaggeration.

This is a habit that is easily slipped into, but it is an element of weakness.

The trouble is that people get to discounting your statements and are apt to believe nothing that you say. They think that you always exaggerate everything.

The Christian Science Monitor points out that one of the values of studying arithmetic is to become accustomed to the joys of accuracy.

If one will acquire the habit of stating as nearly as may be possible exactly what is the fact, if his reputation for stating the facts cleanly is once established, it will be a great element of strength.

Profanity and over-exaggeration and extreme utterances always show that our passions outrun our information.

Always state, the best you can, just exactly what occurred. Accustom yourself to accuracy and modest claims. Then you will be credited with the habit of truth-telling and people will believe what you say.

There may be joy, a certain kind of joy, in exaggeration. It may appeal to the imagination to overstate things.

But there is as much pleasure, after we get used to it, in being accurate and in telling only what is true.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD.

JACKIE COOGAN'S mother sued for alienation of affections, and named in divorce suit! The reformers should make the children stay at home and take better care of their mothers.

Mrs. Coogan says she feels flattered, at her age and weight. Weight might have something to do with it, but yesterday a woman 104 took an airplane flight, a woman 66 asked a divorce because her husband fell in love with her 60-year-old sister, and a woman 58 married an artist 79.

The Alexander Boyle family of Brooklyn ate soup and their two children died of ptomaine poisoning. The parents drank wine with their dinner and lived. Now you see what happens. Suppose Maj. Campbell had passed the Boyle home the day before and sniffed the Boyle cellar? The parents would have died, too. Once when virtue didn't triumph.

It was in 1288 that Scotland made it legal for women to ask men in marriage. There was a pound fine for refusal. It was the year one that women started picking their men and getting them 'ke unto the Northwestern Mounted. And as for one pound—oh girls, isn't that Scotch? If the girls of 1288 could meet Ganna Walska and Peggy Joyce. Whoops, my dears!

Miss Lyn Salter, of Australia, lengthened her skirts on arriving in America. "At home they wore them so much shorter," she explained. She also said the girls in her country were always afraid of looking like the girls of the ballet. No wonder!

George Wright, of Montreal, Que., has a bride. The bride had a lap dog. George's pet peeve concerned lap dogs. Mrs. Wright jokingly told George to shoot the pup. The bullet, being English, too, pierced the wife's lung. She will live. The dog didn't.

Just another one of those terrible English jokes!

Mrs. O'Leary's cow is to have a monument. Chicago's city council bought the property where the cow kicked over the lamp, for $38,000, and a fire station will commemorate the occasion.

Chicago's motto is: "I Will."

She would!

Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick says ennui is much worse than trouble. But trouble is entertaining only up to the saturation point. I know a woman who had ennui from too much trouble. She met an old friend one day and invited him to dinner to meet her fourth husband. He said: "Why don't you invite me to some of your weddings?"

Violets

I KNOW the Spring is on the way
In spite of Winter's threats,
For I found proof of it today
In mist-drenched violets.

With memories dear their fragrance blends,
Far days without regrets!
The past its old enchantments lends
With mist-drenched violets.

Some joys pass by as swift winds blow,
But this no heart forgets,
This Springtime magic after snow,
With mist-drenched violets.
